SAPELOE ISLAND, Ga., Dec. 17.

IN DIFFERENT parts, different things are important. At Harvard it is the astronomical instrument that reveals 165 new variable stars. At Hollywood, it is the variable star that can reveal 165 new emotions. In Wall Street it is the broker who knows when to go in and when to go out.

DOWN here on this east coast of Georgia on Howard Coffin's shooting preserve, the important person is Mose, who can imitate the cluck of a wild turkey.

Mose, colored, thinks he is 68 years old, isn't sure. There is no uncertainty about his ability to imitate wild turkeys. He puts his fingers on either side of his nose, while hiding in the bushes, clucks, and wild turkey gobblers walk up to be shot.

"I always imitate the turkey HEN," says Mose, "because of the two, the gobbler is the more foolish."

It is that way with men, as proved in history of Cleopatra and other ladies.

THREE young women from England, Margery Sharp, Nancy Samuel and Amelia Lockhart, are here, to debate with American college girls.

The British and American girls will argue from viewpoints as far apart as moon and earth. From their cradles they have been taught to think on lines far apart.

But they agree that youth has been too much hampered, men have bossed women too much. All true.

PART of the live stock show activities in Chicago included judging the healthiest boy and girl in the United States.

Thelma Svarstad, a South Dakota girl, who won the female championship is 17 years old, blonde, strong, weighs 122 pounds, 5 feet 2 inches tall, drinks plenty of milk, no tea or coffee, and expects to be a teacher.

THE boy champion is William Tobias, of Michigan, 15 years old, weight 130 pounds, 5 feet 6 inches tall, likes boxing, admires Jack Dempsey, also drinks lots of milk. Milk dealers please notice this in your advertisements.

FROM a live stock, and many other points of view, these are fine American children.

But somewhere in America, there is a little baby shivering in its mother's arms, delicate, with a thin little body, a big head, wide anxious eyes, that some day will do things that the healthiest boy and girl will never do.

Write that down for your comfort, if you have a child that isn't so robust.

PARAGUAYANS in a raid across Bolivia's border killed 25 Bolivians.

Now in the battle of Fort Boqueron, Bolivians kill 100 Paraguayans, who do the best they can, and kill 20 more Bolivians.

BOLIVIA celebrated on Sunday and "Paraguay is preparing to meet the situation," that is to say, preparing to kill more Bolivians.

That Bolivians used airplanes in their attack should interest our people at Washington, some of whom think the airplane is still a toy.

Paraguay accuses the Bolivians of using American loans to purchase fighting material.

BOLIVIA'S President Siles tells 30,000 cheering before his palace that Bolivian troops "gave a splendid exhibition of Bolivian patriotism, in line with glorious tradition."

That is how wars start.

Peace agreements do not prevent war. Safety is in being ready. That diminishes probability of attack.

HERBERT HOOVER is safely out of the Argentine, where anarchists planned to wreck his train. Americans will be glad of that.

Irigoyen, polite and friendly, accompanied Mr. Hoover everywhere in Buenos Aires.

President Campisteguy, of Montevideo, met Mr. Hoover on his arrival.

One more stop, and the next President will be on his way back to the United States. Plenty of work awaits him here.

NEWS of King George was encouraging for a time, thanks to treatment by light therapy.

The back and chest of the royal patient are exposed to artificial light rays that penetrate the tissues, and in a mysterious way stimulate the curative activities of the white blood cells.

EXHAUSTED KING GAINS SLIGHTLY

By HARRY R. FLORY,
International News Service.

LONDON, Dec. 18.—The upward movement in the condition of King George, broken by a slight relapse late Monday, was progressing favorably but slowly this afternoon, it was stated by Buckingham Palace officials.

The King is still in a state of extreme exhaustion. He took to his bed just four weeks ago today.

In palace circles the downward fluctuation in the King's condition late yesterday was attributed to discontinuance of the use of sedatives. No sedatives have been administered in 48 hours. The physicians are trying hard to keep the King going without them.

The morning medical bulletin said the King was slightly improved.

The bulletin said:

"In spite of the King having passed a disturbed night, there is a slight improvement in both the general and local conditions."

It was signed by Sir Stanley Hewitt, Sir Hugh Rigby and Lord

At 3:30 in the afternoon an official announcement said that the improvement noted in the morning bulletin was continuing.

The King had suffered another relapse late yesterday.

Following the depressing bulletin announcing this fact last evening, there came a sensational report that the King had lapsed into unconsciousness.

The report, although unconfirmed, was apparently based upon information secured from an authoritative source.

Early this morning, however, a palace official denied the report and further added that, although the King had been restless through the evening, he was then resting more easily.

'DEB' AND W.-J. STAR ELOPE

Washington and Jefferson College didn't win so many football games in 1928.

But what does Quarterback Morris C. Robinson care?

He—it was revealed today—won a contest, with Cupid calling signals, by slipping off to Wellsburg, W. Va., and marrying Janet MacGregor, of 5701 Fair Oaks street, Pittsburgh, one of the season's debutants.

Announcement of the marriage was equally surprising to W. & J. undergraduates and to Miss MacGregor's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John W. MacGregor.

"Very, very sudden," was the comment at the MacGregor home.

Robinson, besides being quarterback of the Washington and Jefferson varsity football team this last season, is captain of the varsity basketball squad. He is a son of the Rev. Charles H. Robinson, of Wheeling, W. Va., and a nephew of the Rev. A. R. Robinson, pastor of the Sixth United Presbyterian Church of Pittsburgh.

NEW RAIL, RIVER COAL OUTLET BLOCKED

An attempt by the Pittsburgh Coal Company to give mines in this district a low cost rail and river route to markets in the vicinity of Youngstown is blocked by the Interstate Commerce Commission, it was revealed today.

The commission yesterday withheld authority for the construction of 41 miles of additional line by the Pittsburgh, Lisbon and Western Railroad, holding that existing railroad facilities were available.

Early this year the Pittsburgh Coal Company bought control of the Pittsburgh, Lisbon and Western, a 23-mile line from New Galilee to Lisbon, O. Permission then was asked to build two extensions, one south to Smiths Ferry on the Ohio River and one north to Youngstown.

The line would have made it possible for mines on the Monongahela River to ship coal by barge to Smiths Ferry and from there to Youngstown by rail at a substantial saving in freight over the all-rail route.

It would also have enabled Youngstown steel producers to ship their products by barge down the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers to southern points.

Officials of the Pittsburgh Coal Company said that they were not prepared to make any comment when told of the action by the commission. They stated that they had not decided what their next step would be.

2 BANDITS FLEE WITH $75,000

Police late today apparently were without a clue which might lead to the capture of the two bandits who dashed out of Unger's jewelry store, at 976 Liberty avenue, last night with $75,000 in merchandise.

One of the boldest downtown holdups in years, its perpetrators appeared to have made good their escape 16 hours after they sped away in a stolen auto.

Their faces hidden behind blue bandanna handkerchiefs, automatic pistols in their hands, the two holiday bandits walked into the store just before closing time—10:30 o'clock—and shouted this order:

"Stick 'em up."

The five persons in the store—owner, three clerks and a jewelry salesman—all obeyed. One girl fainted.

COWS STORE FORCE

While one gunman kept the persons in the shop under control his confederate grabbed three trays of rings, watches and gems. The bandits backed out of the store, ran around the corner to William Penn way and hopped aboard their stolen auto.

Clark Elizabeth Salmon, 18, of 4515 Liberty avenue, had fainted when one of the visitors aimed a potent pistol barrel in her direction. Another girl, Marion Barnett, 20, of 1219 Sheridan avenue, was counting a large sum of money which the bandits overlooked.

Max Unger, the proprietor, and an employe, Lester A. Giegerich, of Avalon, were preparing to close when they were interrupted. Giegerich had just removed the three trays of expensive jewelry from a display window. The fifth person was Samuel Ackerman, a jewelry salesman, of New York. The "transaction" required not more than two minutes.

A motorist who saw the bandits rushing into their car copied the license number and gave it to police. It proved to be the auto of Attorney Louis Little, stolen several days ago.

EDWARD MULLINS

TEACHER HITS AT GAMBLING IN SCHOOLS

M. J. McLaughlin, of 1207 Margaret street, Munhall, manual training teacher in the Thaddeus Stevens School, West End, and a former prohibition officer, today defended his position in the charges brought against him for the alleged beating of a pupil. McLaughlin declares that pupils in the public schools are being corrupted by a gambling ring through the distribution of punch boards.

"If necessary, I will devote all my energies toward breaking up the practice of involving the children in the use of gambling devices," said McLaughlin. "The situation is serious and the board of education will back me up."

McLaughlin was arraigned last night before Alderman Patrick Cawley on charges of beating Edward Mullins, 14, of 175 Danley street, an eighth grade pupil in St. James parochial school, who is also a student in the manual training class in the Thaddeus Stevens public school. The boy testified that McLaughlin found him with a small punch board in his pocket and disciplined him by beating him with a piece of wood, tearing his clothes and inflicting several painful bruises on his body. Several other pupils in their testimony supported Mullins' story. Alderman Cawley reserved his decision.

Reapportionment Work Postponed

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—(INS.)—Action on reapportionment legislation was postponed until after the Christmas recess by the House census committee today. Five committee members, Representatives Johnson (Rep.), of Washington; Jacobstein (Dem.), of New York; Clancy (Rep.), of Michigan; Peavy (Rep.), of Wisconsin, and White (Rep.), of Kansas, were unable to appear because of illness. Some of them were said to be threatened with influenza.

Gardner Holds Up Graft Warrants Over Christmas

District Attorney Gardner has 49 warrants almost ready for the group indicted by the grand jury in the recent graft investigation. He could have served them tomorrow, or the next day—but he won't. He said today he'd wait until after December 25—Christmas Day.

ARRESTING OFFICER HELD

Quashing of the riot indictments against Patrick Toohey and John Brophy, insurgent mine labor leaders, over the protests of counsel for the Civil Liberties Union today, was followed quickly by the arrest of Corp. Michael J. Onko, of state police, on a charge of criminal assault. The charge was preferred by Toohey.

Other arrests on criminal and civil charges are predicted in a statement issued by Clarence Darrow, Chicago attorney, here as counsel for the two labor leaders. Onko was released on $500 bond furnished by Sheriff Robert H. Braun.

The indictments against Toohey and Brophy were quashed by Judge A. B. Reid on motion of District Attorney Samuel H. Gardner.

DARROW LEADS ATTACK

The defense of Toohey and Brophy and the charges against Onko were engineered by Darrow and other attorneys representing the American Civil Liberties Union, who contend the case has an important bearing on the cause of civil liberty and free assemblage.

Hays and Darrow, with Attorneys L. K. Porter and Henry Ellenbogen, were to have defended the two labor leaders.

COURTROOM CROWDED

The coming of Attorneys Hayes and Darrow to Pittsburgh to defend the two men who had been charged with riot and inciting to riot by Sheriff Robert Braun, as the result of a demonstration at Renton, had given more than usual importance to the case. The courtroom was crowded with attorneys and labor leaders. Darrow was not in court when the case was called.

A conference by District Attorney Gardner, his assistant, George S. P. Langfitt, and Judge Reid was held in chambers, and when the latter appeared on the bench with Judge Josiah Cohen, Gardner moved to quash the indictment.

"NO RIOT," GARDNER SAYS

Gardner said two important witnesses were ill and could not attend. Besides, he said, there had been no riot; the sheriff had broken up the meeting before a riot occurred. He recited events of the coal strike leading up to the meeting and at the conclusion moved that the indictment be quashed, and the costs placed on the county.

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—(AP.)—Mme. Ganna Walska (Mrs. Harold McCormick) was an influenza patient today and her appeal against the ruling of the Treasury Department that she must pay duty on jewelry she brought into this country from France recently was adjourned.

Insane Asylum Bars Infant With Mother

CHICAGO, Dec. 18.—(INS.)—Mrs. Catherine Zalis, 21, found guilty by a jury of criminal insanity in connection with the smothering to death of her first infant, will go to the state insane asylum at Elgin, Ill., without her year-old baby, Betty Ann, it was announced today.

R. T. Hinton, superintendent of the institution, said he had no facilities at the asylum for taking care of the infant.

TESTS POISON ON HER FISH, ENDS LIFE AS FRIEND CALLS

As a man with whom she had quarreled was entering a window of her apartment to seek reconciliation today, police say, Miss Eleanor Graylock, 26-year-old drug store cashier, of 312 Sampson street, drained a vial of poison. She died seven minutes after being admitted to the Presbyterian Hospital.

Three bowls of dead goldfish indicated, police say, that she first had tested the poison on the fish.

According to a statement by Edward Hlawati, 28, of 3636 East street, Miss Graylock had chided him last night for not calling on her last Sunday.

"You will not see me after tonight," Miss Graylock told him, according to Hlawati's statement to Lieut. Harry Moore and Sergt. Michael Daugherty.

"I thought she was only joking," police say Hlawati told them.

Unable to reach her today by telephone, he related, he went to her apartment, found the door locked, ran to a window and was forcing it open when Miss Graylock appeared, declaring, "Well, here goes."

"When I got inside the window I saw her drink something she had in a glass," Hlawati told police, they say. Hlawati said he gave her milk and eggs as an antidote, then took her to the hospital. She died without making a statement, other than to say she had swallowed poison, according to the hospital authorities.

Coroner's officials found written on a coin envelope marked: "Christmas, 1927," these words:

"This gift I give to the woman I wish God had given to me."

Coroner W. J. McGregor said Hlawati admitted writing the note to accompany a gift of money last Christmas.

A note on a bank book, which showed $1,500 deposits, bore this request: "Give money to Frieda in Harmarville." A note in Miss Graylock's purse bore the name of Mrs. Frieda Gradek, Harmarville.

FLAMES CHEAT CRIPPLED GIRL OF JOY AT RECOVERY

Able to walk for the first time in two years yesterday, Irene Bailey, 8, of 817 Tobin street, today is in Allegheny General Hospital, her neck, shoulders and arms seared by flames.

Jean Bailey, 7, Irene's sister, touched a match to the coal stove in the Bailey home. Frightened as the match burst into flame, she jerked her hand back, and the match ignited Irene's dress.

Cries of the girl brought her mother, Mrs. Effie Bailey, who aided by neighbors, wrapped the victim in blankets, and extinguished the flames. Then the girl was taken to the hospital.

MAYOR'S OUTBURST OF "FIRING" STARTLES CITY HALL

FEARN CASE SURVEY STARTS

CANTON, O., Dec. 18.—Ora Slater, the detective who brought to justice the slayers of Don Mellett, crusading Canton editor, arrived here today and undertook the task of fitting to a logical pattern the facts authorities have uncovered in the slaying of Vernard E. Fearn.

Slater expected that late this afternoon he would question Wilbur A. Heldman, the young furnace salesman, who asserted his wife, Margaret, killed herself while he was bringing her here to surrender her to police after she had confessed killing Fearn.

HELDMAN STILL IN JAIL

Heldman is in the county jail under $25,000 bond as a coroner's witness.

The sleuth said he had not formed an opinion on the case. He expected to spend the day checking over the movements of Fearn and the Heldmans before and on December 6, when Fearn was called to the door of his home in Waco, a suburb, and shot to death by a girl who vanished as mysteriously as she appeared.

NO NEW CLUES

County Prosecutor Henry Harter, Jr., who retained Slater, said no new facts in the case had been learned that clashed with Heldman's story of his part in the murder and suicide.

What Harter wished to learn, he said, was whether any conspiracy existed between Mrs. Heldman and her husband, and if so, was her part a willing one.

The belief that Mrs. Heldman killed Fearn to prevent exposure of intimacy between them collapsed when there were produced letters which showed that such intimacy had been disclosed to her husband six weeks before the slaying.

"SAVE UNION" CHIEFS FREED

fered to admit as evidence, anything witnesses might testify to get the case before the jury. He contended this case involves the practice of breaking up meetings and is a larger action than merely a riot charge against two men.

Reminded by the court of its power to grant a non-suit, Attorney Hays said: "Denying men the right to speak publicly is a grave question."

Following quashing of the indictment Attorney Darrow issued a statement, characterizing the arrest of Brophy and Toohey as an attempt to stifle free speech.

F. E. Woltman, secretary of the Pittsburgh Branch of the Civil Liberties Union, charged that the quashing of the indictment prevented a revelation of brutality by State Police. He said a mass meeting would be held in the Y. M. and Y. W. H. A. hall, Bellefield avenue, tonight at which these matters would be discussed.

Darrow in a statement issued after the case had been quashed insisted that the battle for free assembly would be fought in another direction. He said that persons connected with the breaking up of the meeting would be prosecuted on charges of false arrest or malicious prosecution. The filing of a suit against Corp. Onko was the beginning of these suits, he said.

Sheriff Braun, after furnishing bail for Onko, said: "I have nothing but commendation both for the state police and my deputies for handling the situation in a most diplomatic and efficient police fashion."

Many institutions are playing Santa Claus to employes as well as stockholders by distributing generous bonuses.

The shooting, police said, was the result of jealousy over Blackham's alleged friendship for Haughey's wife.

ANTI-WAR PACT TO PASS WITH BIG VOTE

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON.
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18. — The Kellogg multilateral anti-war treaty was approved today by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, but under such secretive conditions as to create a mystery.

Senator Borah, (Rep.), of Idaho, chairman, announced he was taking a poll of the committee and that, while it was not completed, the treaty probably would be approved. Other senators, however, announced a vote had been taken with 15 senators favoring the treaty, one opposing it, and two not voting. The lone vote in opposition was Senator James A. Reed (Dem.), of Missouri, leader of the old "irreconcilable" group.

RATIFICATION SURE

The treaty will be ratified by the Senate by an overwhelming vote, with or without a resolution of explanation, it was disclosed today by an International News Service poll.

The same poll indicated that the "big navy" bill, intended to place the American Navy on a par with that of Great Britain, faces stiff opposition, but probably will be enacted after a lengthy debate. The naval bill's greatest obstacle will be the political hazard created by ratification of the Kellogg treaty, under which about 55 nations pledge themselves to outlaw all war.

The action of Democratic leaders in supporting the treaty insured its ratification. While such minority party spokesmen as Senators Swanson (Dem.), of Virginia, and Walsh (Dem.), of Montana, ridiculed the compact as "worthless," both announced they would vote for its ratification.

The fight on the "Big Navy" bill, which would authorize the building of 15 new cruisers and an aircraft carrier, came from a different source. The so-called "Pacifists" of the Senate, aided by senators who advocate aircraft and submarine construction instead of battleships, planned to block a vote on the naval measure until after the treaty is ratified. This program, they believed, would increase the opposition to heavy naval expenditures.

HESS IN RACE FOR SPEAKER OF HOUSE

Representative Aaron B. Hess, Lancaster, today announced his candidacy for Speaker of the House, in telegrams addressed to a number of Allegheny County representatives.

According to reports, the Speaker has not yet been slated, but Hess, with the support of Joseph R. Grundy, head of the Pennsylvania Manufacturers Association, is regarded as having an edge on other apirants, as far as securing the organization indorsement is concerned.

Friends of Representative James H. McClure, Glassport, the present speaker, have not given up hopes of securing the indorsement for him. McClure ascended to the speakership when Thomas Bluett, Philadelphia, resigned to become judge. If Hess or some other is slated instead of McClure, the latter may get his old post as chairman of the powerful judiciary general committee.

Hess at present is chairman of the public roads committee of the House.

Harvard Students Riot on Train; One Injured

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Dec. 18.—(A.P.)—A Boston elevated railway starter was nursing injuries today and a Harvard student, John Wisner, 17, of New York City, was under arrest following a melee in which nearly 1,000 persons were involved.

Hugh MacDonald, the starter, was on a train filled with Harvard students returning from a hockey game in Boston. They were venting their displeasure at Harvard's defeat by smashing bulbs and tearing advertising signs from the walls.

MacDonald grasped one youth, but friends of the prisoner wrested him free. MacDonald grabbed Wisner and, despite a severe beating, held him until police took him into custody.

Numerous train windows were smashed and several girls narrowly escaped being pushed into the train pit by the milling crowd.

Jeanesville School Destroyed by Fire

HAZLETON, Pa., Dec. 18.—(AP.)—A two-roomed frame schoolhouse at Jeanesville, Banks Township, was destroyed by fire this morning. The blaze is thought to have started from an overheated stove.

The loss was $7,500. The Hazleton and Park View fire departments were called but the structure was almost in ruins when they arrived.

United States Opens Nanking Consulate

NANKING, China, Dec. 18.—(AP.)—The United States consulate in Nanking, closed since the Nanking incident of March, 1927, was reopened today. The consulate had been looted during the Nanking difficulties.

ROTHSTEIN KIN FIGHT DYING BEQUESTS

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—(INS)—The second round in the Arnold Rothstein will battle was to be fought today, with Assemblyman Maurice Cantor, attorney for the slain gambler and one of the beneficiaries under the second will, testifying as to the manner in which the dying man signed the document with an "X." Rothstein's relatives are contesting the validity of the second will, which bequeaths fortunes to Cantor and to Inez Norton, show girl friends of the master gambler and alleged drug ring head.

Miss Elizabeth Love, a nurse at Polyclinic Hospital, where Rothstein was lying in a critical state at the time, testified yesterday that the patient was helpless and that Cantor guided the hand which scribbled the "X." The nurse said Rothstein was irrational at the time and that she had consented to act as a witness only to get Cantor out of the sick-room. He had forced his way into the room, she declared.

The present legal proceeding is merely a hearing which precedes the trial.

POLICE SHAKE-UP SEEN

Grover A. Whalen leaves a lucrative post with a metropolitan department store to take over the uncomfortable post of police commissioner as a result of the Rothstein case. He was to be sworn in in City Hall today.

A radical shake-up in the personnel of the department is forecast. The department has been under fire for alleged inefficiency in investigating the murder. Whalen's predecessor, Joseph A. Warren, and George V. McLaughlin, whom Warren succeeded, each held the precarious job for less than two years.

Whalen has held several municipal posts, the last being the city's official welcomer to distinguished guests.

"MAN WITH KEG" IN WHITE HOUSE IS DARROW IDEAL

Clarence Darrow, defender of free speech, American liberties and other subjects dear to the heart of the debater, would look with favor upon "a man sitting in the White House on a keg of beer," he said here today apropos of the dire prediction of "Billy" Sunday.

"Yes, sir," the benign Mr. Darrow remarked in an interview, "I took the stump for Al Smith and I voted for Al Smith. Possibly he is the man Mr. Sunday referred to.

"Heaven hasten the day when his prediction comes true!"

Mr. Darrow referred to "Billy" Sunday's declaration yesterday that unless the illicit liquor traffic and "racketeers" were suppressed the country would go to the "wets" and would soon have a "man in the White House sitting on a keg of beer."

In the matter of free speech, the famous barrister was voluble. Arthur Garfield Hayes, renowned author of "Let Freedom Ring," heartily endorsed his utterances and added to them fluently.

"There were Patrick Henry, Thomas Jefferson and others. Yes, even Pat Toohey and John Brophy. We are here to defend them."

Brophy and Toohey were charged with inciting a riot in connection with an alleged mine disorder at Renton last March. The trial, however, came to an abrupt end when the prosecution asked that the charge be quashed. The court granted the plea.

DOUBLE PAY ASKED FOR NOLAN JOB

The hiring, firing and paying of city employes continued the chief topic of interest in City Hall today.

Mayor Kline was awaiting a letter from Murray G. Livingston, veteran chief of the city division of weights and measures, demanding specific reasons why the Mayor had dismissed him.

Livingston said he would appeal to the Civil Service Commission in the event that his case is not settled satisfactorily by Mayor Kline.

Council has before it, although not for formal action for a week, the appointment of Leo Rothenberg as successor of Magistrate John J. Verona, discharged by the Mayor six months ago.

DELAY APPROVAL

Kline sent Rothenberg's name to Council yesterday, but on motion of R. J. Alderdice, action was postponed until next Monday. The position is subject to Council's confirmation.

Alderdice's action was not taken to indicate any hostility but rather a move to give members of Council time to weigh the candidate's fitness.

ONE JOB MAY PAY TWO

Council also is to consider the proposal of paying two city employes for the same job. The latter situation is an outgrowth of the firing by the Mayor seven months ago of A. P. Nolan. The Mayor later was reversed and Nolan was reinstated by the Civil Service Commission and now council is asked to pay Nolan for his lost time and also pay George Myers, whom the Mayor appointed to succeed him.

A resolution presented by Councilman John A. Herron would authorize payment of $868.90 each to Nolan and Myers as salary for approximately seven months in the same position of inspector in the division of weights and measures.

Nolan was the incumbent until election day last May when he was told by Chief Inspector Livingston to "go home and stay home."

C. Davis, of Defuniak Springs, Fla. Muscogee passed away when the lumber mill had consumed all available timber. With the sale went 2,300 acres of land.

Drinker Sentenced To Sunday School

WAYNESBURG, Pa., Dec. 18.—When Howard Howard, 28, Assyrian horse trainer of this place, appeared before Burgess John L. Wood three times in as many weeks on a charge of being drunk, the burgess was touched with the Christmas spirit, and instead of ordering Howard back to jail, sentenced him to attend Sunday School every Sunday for three months and to remain sober during that time. Howard said he would comply with the sentence.

CRUSADES FAIL TO DRY UP BIG CITIES

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN.
International News Service.

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—Rum running crusades, police graft "clean-ups" and wars on bootlegging and racketeering are in full swing in various American cities. But it is proving an uphill and difficult battle and indicatons are that this year's supply of "holiday booze" will be as plentiful as ever, a survey by International News Service disclosed today.

A bird's-eye view of the nation, judging by advices received, would reveal Florida receiving nearly $1,000,000 worth of liquor each week from the Bahama Islands and elsewhere; the city of New York getting a huge pre-Christmas supply from the "rum fleet;" Detroit as sort of a distributing point for rum smuggled across the Canadian border, and interior cities—from coast to coast—obtaining illegal "hootch" in devious ways.

PHILA. PROGRESS SLOW

Philadelphia, now in the eighteenth week of its grand jury investigation of racketeering and police graft, reports progress. To date two police captains and three detectives have been convicted and jailed for long prison terms as grafters. So have one ward leader and a state legislator.

Pittsburgh's investigation has not been so fruitful. Although the names of many officials, politicians, racketeers and bootleggers have been mentioned only one "big shot" is in the toils of the law—Al Forney, so-called "king" of Pittsburgh's slot machine racket.

Chicago, resenting the "black eye" given the city as a result of a long series of gang killings, has called for a new deal. A new state's attorney and police chief are trying to clean up what a short time back was a "wide open town." Not much progress has yet been made.

Sells One Bridge and Then Retires for Life

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—(INS.)—The man who "sold" the Brooklyn Bridge and "lots" in City Hall Park on numerous occasions during the past half century was taken to Sing Sing today for the rest of his life. The veteran "con" man, George C. Parker, 68, was convicted of larceny as a fourth offender.

His last offense was cashing a worthless check for $150 in a restaurant.

Churches Reunite, Ending 68-Year Slavery Split

MERCER, Pa., Dec. 18.—The congregation of the Central Presbyterian Church has united with the First Presbyterian Church under the name of the Presbyterian Church of Mercer.

The union follows 68 years of separation, the split taking place on the slavery question.

All that remains to make the union legal is the indorsement of the Erie Presbytery. This affects 500 members in the two churches.

CITY ENGINEER REQUESTED

Council today will consider a request from the Department of Public Works for authority to employ a consulting engineer at not more than $2,500 to make tests of all new mechanical equipment for Ross Pumping Station.

The department explained that the Water Bureau was completing the installation of major equipment aggregating approximately $310,000 and that the amount to be paid was contingent upon the results of efficiency tests of the machinery.

Deductions of $41,450 are probable if the equipment does not meet maximum requirements, and the department stated that the best interests would be served if tests were conducted by a third "unbiased" agent.

'Santa Claus,' Fired, Accused of Theft

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—(INS.)—Accused by the police of stealing the pot and collections of his successor after being "fired" as a Volunteers of America Santa Claus for being drunk, John Collins finds himself in jail today with his prospects of a merry Christmas none too bright.

Auto Hurts Fatal To Glenville Man

WALES WOULD FIT BIBLE PROPHECY AS 'KING DAVID'

NORTH PLAINFIELD, N. J., Dec. 28.—If, when the Prince of Wales succeeds to the throne of the British Empire, he assumes the title of "King David," as has been indicated in dispatches from abroad, it will be fulfillment of a Biblical prophecy, according to George W. Bird, Baptist lawyer and student of Zionist affairs.

The name "David" is the one by which the Prince of Wales is called in the royal household.

"Inasmuch as Palestine is now under the mandate of Great Britain," Bird said today, "the assumption of the title King David by the Prince of Wales would bear out the fourth and fifth verses of the third chapter of Hosea, written 2,700 years ago.

"In this part of the Scripture we read:

"'For the children of Israel shall abide many days without a king and without a prince, and without a sacrifice, and without an image, and without an ephod, and without Teraphim: Afterward shall the children of Israel return and seek the Lord their God and David their king; and shall fear the Lord and His goodness in the latter days.'

"And again in the ninth verse of the thirtieth chapter of Jeremiah, written 2,500 years ago, we also read:

"'But they shall serve the Lord their God and David their king, whom I will raise up unto them.'"

"Kiss Slayer" Ready For Long Prison Term

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—(INS.)—Vincent Rice, 17, "kiss slayer" who confessed killing his 15-year-old sweetheart, Alice Joost, prepared today to spent at least the next 20 years of his life behind prison bars. The boy, who suddenly pleaded guilty to murder in the second degree after his trial had been under way five hours, will be sentenced on Thursday. The Joost girl was found strangled to death on a bed in her home on November 2. Rice said he killed her because she attempted to kiss him against his will.

WILKINS READY FOR FLIGHT

By CAPT. SIR HUBERT WILKINS,
Commander of the Wilkins-Hearst Antarctic Expedition.

(Copyright, 1928, by the New York American and Universal Service, Inc.)

DECEPTION ISLAND (Antarctica), Dec. 17.—(Via Whaler Hektoria and KUP, San Francisco Examiner Wireless Station)—Fate smiled more kindly today on our hopes for a getaway into the south on our aerial Antarctic expedition, clearing weather enabling us to make a short flight southward for investigation.

Tonight we are waiting, with seaplane ready to start at a moment's notice.

Today Deception Island was basked in sunshine. Anticipating good weather, our seaplane, fully loaded, had been placed at anchor at 10 o'clock last night.

At 1 a. m. the wind lulled and the cloud dispersed, only to pile up again from low on the water in Brandsfield Strait to high over Graham's Land plateau.

A watch was maintained from a hill at the harbor mouth.

The cloud wall remained loose and ice drifted into the harbor, with the tide ruining any chance for a seaplane to take off; but shortly after noon today we took a light load in the plane San Francisco, now on wheels, and flew south to investigate.

Climbing steeply to 6,000 feet, we were level with the cloud tops. Graham's Land for 100 miles and as far ahead as we could see was obscured except for a few isolated mountain peaks.

We could have continued on above the clouds, but the flight would have served no useful purpose. We must see the country in order to explore it.

We are earnestly hoping that conditions will improve and are waiting with the seaplane ready to start at a moment's notice. The improvement in conditions today was a joy to us and an indication that we can expect better days to come.

Fall Ill, Argument On Trial Postponed

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—(INS.)—Argument on the government motion to bring ex-Secretary of Interior Albert B. Fall to trial on January 14 for bribery in connection with the Elk Hills oil reserve lease to E. L. Doheny was indefinitely postponed in District of Columbia Supreme Court today. Defense counsel said Fall's physical condition would not permit him to come to Washington in the dead of winter. A physician will be appointed to examine Fall in El Paso, Tex.

Rich Boy at Yale Weds Painter's Daughter

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Dec. 18.—(INS.)—Yale undergraduates who had been contemplating a plunge into matrimony paused today to consider the case of Thomas L. Wheeler, 21, scion of a wealthy and socially prominent St. Paul (Minn.) family who was expelled from the university yesterday for violating the rule forbidding undergraduate marriages. A heated controversy is being waged.

The expulsion was made by Dean Clarence W. Mendell upon receiving official notification that Wheeler, a sophomore, last Saturday married Miss Emily Brest, 20, a second year student at the Arnold school here. She is the daughter of John Brest, a house painter of this city.

SAFETY FORCE ASKS RAISE

Council today was considering requests for increased pay for policemen and firemen, which, if granted, will add $342,480 to the $2,450,000 estimated as the police payroll for 1929, and $396,286 to the $1,990,000 estimated as the firemen's payroll next year.

Other requests for pay increase were received as follows:

Florists, Bureau of Parks; linemen, Bureau of Electricity; clerk, chemist and laborers, filtration division, Bureau of Water.

Inspectors in the Bureau of Sanitation requested an increase that would be equivalent to the cost of their uniforms.

PAUL JAWORSKI KIND MATE, WIFE SAYS

Paul Jaworski, convicted murderer, was a good husband and father, declared his wife, here today with her baby girl, for a visit to the doomed slayer.

The bandit leader's pretty wife is Mrs. Margaret Pallas, for Pallas is the Jaworski family name. She was met at the Pennsylvania station on her arrival from Chicago, by Mrs. Catherine Logan, Jaworski's sister, and went immediately to the county jail to see her husband, doomed to die the first week in January in the electric chair.

"Paul always treated me right and I loved him. I still love him," she declared hugging little Lorraine Margaret, her daughter.

"People say Paul got a lot of money, but I never saw any of it. Paul and I have been married four years and I worked all the time up until he was arrested the first time in Pittsburgh.

"I thought Paul was working, too. We lived in Detroit and he always went out in the morning and came back at night as though he were working. We lived in a little flat and I had to work to make both ends meet. It was a hard struggle."

Mrs. Pallas paused and looked at her baby.

SPEAKS OF HAPPY DAYS

"Paul was very fond of Lorraine. You know why he took the chances he did when he escaped, don't you?" she inquired and then explained quickly.

"You see, he knew how things were, and about three months after he came back to me, Lorraine was born. We lived in Cleveland after that, and I would give anything to relive those wonderful days. He would spend hours at a time playing with Lorraine.

"If only they would let him live. I could go to see him once in a while at least."

Mrs. Logan is contemplating legal steps in a last effort to save her brother from the chair, claiming he has already atoned for his crimes by the suffering from his wounds received when he was captured several months ago.

6 SENT TO JAIL IN RUM CASES

Harry Grob in Federal Court Monday was sentenced to serve four months in jail and pay a $200 fine when he pleaded guilty to conducting a "common nuisance" at 2150 Wylie avenue, by selling and possessing intoxicating liquor. His wife pleaded guilty to the charge of selling and possessing liquor and was fined $20.

Luka Bucher pleaded guilty to violating the dry law and was sentenced to pay a fine of $200 and serve four months in jail. Three others who pleaded guilty to violating the prohibition act, Peter Martin, Frank Peter and John Crowly were each ordered to pay a $200 fine and serve two months in jail. Another, John Ockay, received a two months' jail sentence, without a fine.

The following defendants also pleaded guilty to violating the prohibition law and were fined as follows: George Kokinakis, $125; Louis Milter, John E. Wall, Mike Seibert, Wilbur T. Myers, Joseph Smith, Walter Daily and Oscar Lampert, $100 each; Lorenz Klagg, $75; Stanley Przeoski, $50; Herman J. Eichler, Andrew Pavlis, Frank D'uva, Domineck Palomerina, $25 each, and Sam Debone and Tony Daversa, $10 each.

'KICK' IS LEGAL IN CHRISTMAS MINCE PIES

HOW DO YOU LIKE YOUR MINCE PIE? (With or without?)

Folks shopping for their Christmas pies this year may expect the above query from the shopkeeper, and if he leans confidentially over the counter and whispers "With or without?" you may be sure he means just what is inferred.

Nor does he have to whisper it—this is only for effect, or perhaps politeness.

The day has arrived when you can get genuine before-prohibition mince pie—fruit cake—plum pudding. The law does not prohibit the sale of foods containing a reasonable taste of the stuff that is harder and harder to get. In fact, special permits are issued to manufacturers of food products which make it possible for them to obtain real bonded liquors for this purpose.

John D. Pennington, prohibition administrator for Pittsburgh, when asked about the legality of the mince pie with a "kick," laughed heartily.

"Certainly they are allowed to put liquor in it! A man couldn't get a jag out of a barrel full. There are plenty of manufacturers in Pittsburgh using liquor under government supervision, but they are required to make full report for the liquor used in this way, much the same as the physician who prescribes it to his patients."

Further inquiry at the local prohibition offices revealed that a North Side firm was probably the biggest manufacturer of pre-war mince meat in this district. For several years this firm's output of the Yuletide delicacy has run into many tons.

GIRL CHEMIST TESTS USE OF TIN TO WEIGHT SILKS

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., Dec. 18.—How much tin should be used in weighting a silk dress? What effect do chemicals have on tin-weighted silk or artificial silk fabrics? These are questions which Miss Winifred Mather Forbes will endeavor to solve at the Pennsylvania State College in connection with the textile standardization fellowship which was awarded to her this year by the Textile Section of the American Home Economics Association.

Miss Forbes was graduated from the Pennsylvania State College last June after majoring in textile chemistry. As an undegraduate student she was the recipient of two scholarship funds and three scholarship medals. She is the daughter of Dr. E. B. Forbes, the director of the Institute of Animal Nutrition at Penn State.

Miss Forbes' research problem will be under the direction of Mrs. Pauline Beery Mack, who is in charge of textile chemistry at Penn State, and national chairman of the textile section of the American Home Economics Association.

"It is not unusual that tin-weighted silk fabrics contain from 50 to 60 per cent of their weight in tin," Mrs. Mack said today. "This is the case especially with silk dresses priced to sell around $6.95 and $12.75. Excessive tin-weighting of silk shortens the life of the fabric, and silk fabrics over weighted with tin do not stand up well when dry cleaned. Miss Forbes is attempting to find a limitation in the amount of tin that should be used in weighting silk fabrics."

ZONING BOARD TO INSPECT AIRPORT SITE BY PLANE

Merits of a proposed airport site on a tract adjoining Leach Farm Municipal Tuberculosis Hospital will be determined when the city Zoning Board of Appeals makes its first aerial inspection trip, it was disclosed today.

John E. Born, builder and real estate man, has appealed to the Zoning Board for the right to establish a privately owned and operated airport on 49 acres near the hospital site.

A permit has been refused him so far by the City Bureau of Building Inspection on the ground that the zoning regulations prohibit airports in Class B residential districts.

A hearing on Born's appeal, held by the board yesterday, was continued pending more thorough study.

"An airplane flight will provide the only adequate means of judging the merits of the project," said W. M. Jacoby, chairman of the Zoning Board, today. "This will be taken after other information as to feasibility and possibilities has been obtained. No date has been set."

Other members of the board are J. W. Cree, Jr., and W. C. Rice.

PLANS FOR NEW P. R. R. STATION UNDER WAY

Engineers of the city and the Pennsylvania Railroad Company today will begin a survey for tentative plans for a new passenger station comparable with the railroad company's pending schedule for freight and produce yard extensions.

James F. Malone, president of Council, initiated the project recently by asking the railroad company to consider building the passenger station near the present terminal at Eleventh street and Liberty avenue.

COMMITTEE IN SESSION

Malone appointed a committee, including all members of Council and other city officials, to meet company executives to formulate a plan and the joint committee held its first meeting yesterday.

E. T. Whiter, vice president of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, explained that consideration had been given to plans for remodeling the present passenger station and the company would be glad to consider Council's suggestion for a new building.

At his suggestion, the city building inspectors will be notified of the pending proposals for guidance in case applications are made for building permits in the affected area, particularly on the south side of Penn avenue, between Eleventh and Twenty-first streets.

UTILITY WORK DELAYED

In addition, it was decided to ask all public utility companies to withhold decision for the present on any major installation in that district.

URUGUAY VISIT OVER, HOOVER OFF FOR RIO

By LAWRENCE SULLIVAN,
International News Service.

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay, Dec. 18.—Having visited nine nations on his Latin-American "good-will" tour since he first landed at Amapala, Honduras, on November 25, President-elect Hoover boarded the U. S. S. Utah today and sailed on the journey north to Rio de Janeiro.

Mr. Hoover appeared pleased by reports that the dispute between Bolivia and Paraguay appeared to be less threatening.

The Hoover party steamed on the Uruguayan cruiser Uruguay eight miles outside this port to the anchorage of the Utah.

The party then transferred to the American warship. An enormous quantity of luggage, gifts received by Mr. and Mrs. Hoover and others of the party from the nations visited and floral tributes received here, were also transferred.

The Utah will arrive at Rio de Janeiro on Friday, where it will drop anchor until Monday, when the voyage northward will be resumed. Although it has not been officially announced, it is believed the intended visit to Havana will be eliminated because of pressure of time.

FIRE IN STORE DOWNTOWN

A large crowd watched firemen extinguish a blaze in the stockroom of the wholesale jewelry store of Landau Brothers, on the first floor of the Moose Temple Building, 628 Penn avenue, last night. Damage was estimated at $400 by Battalion Fire Chief William Graves.

The fire was discovered in a rear wall of the store by John Deleth, a clerk. Philip Caplan, another clerk, turned in the alarm. Traffic in the vicinity was tied up for 30 minutes.

4 PAY FOR ROAD ADVICE FROM DRY CHIEF

Besides losing their automobile and a gallon of moonshine whisky and missing a wedding celebration, four motorists who stopped Assistant Prohibition Administrator Joseph A. Frayne on the William Penn highway, near New Alexandria, to ask the way to Greensburg, yesterday were fined $60 when they pleaded guilty in Federal court to transporting contraband.

"Talk about bad luck," said one of the party. "Of all the motorists on the highway we had to pick out a prohibition officer whose sense of smell was so acute he discovered we had a bottle of 'moonie' in our car. The next time we will carry a road map."

The four men, who gave their names as Frank Piva, Sam Delone, Tony Daversa and Dominick Palomerina, said they were en route to a wedding celebration in Greensburg when arrested. They lost no time in having the charge against them disposed of. Early yesterday, after spending Sunday in jail, where Frayne led them, they appeared before the United States commissioner, who ordered them held for court. A short time later they went into court, pleaded guilty and were fined.

Youths Get 8 Years For Liquor Slaying

EBENSBURG, Pa., Dec. 18.—Ernest Hern, 22, of Toledo, O., and Boyd Shaffer, 23, Juniata, who pleaded guilty to second degree murder last week, were sentenced in court here yesterday to pay the costs and serve from eight to 16 years each in the Western penitentiary.

They confessed the shooting of Tony Antonio early in October at his shanty near Ashville, in a dispute over 25 cents for a pint of moonshine whisky.

200 Children Sing Christmas Carols

CONNELLSVILLE, Pa., Dec. 18.—A Christmas carol service, with 200 children participating, was held last night. It was arranged under the direction of Miss Agnes Duel, supervisor of music in the elementary school grades.

TEACHERS' PAY SCHEDULE ADOPTED

After hearing complaints and suggestions for revision from a score or more school teachers, supervisors and principals, the Board of Education last night unanimously adopted the Citizens' Committee salary schedule which has drawn much criticism from teachers during the past month.

Four "distinct contributions to the cause of public education" were set forth in the resolutions accepting the Citizens' Committee schedule. They follow:

"Financial reward for merit of those teachers whose service is conspicuously strong.

"A percentage limitation of those eligible, in the light of experience in teaching and in every avenue of life, is not only reasonable, but generous.

"A practical and workable method of administration.

"A fair balance between the economic need of the average teacher and the economic taxpaying ability of the average taxpayer."

TEACHERS PROTEST

The teachers had objected particularly to the 45 per centum limitation on the number of instructors eligible to the so-called superior levels in the high school group. A dozen or more men and women representing the Pittsburgh Teachers' Association and the Schoolmen's League, voiced the complaint for members of these groups and presented a number of reasons why they believed the "merit system" would not be practicable.

Miss Maud Walker, president of the Teachers' Association, and W. G. Showman, president of the Schoolmen's League, headed the delegations from these organizations.

In answer to these complaints, the resolutions adopted by the board said:

"We interpret the thought of the committee to be that no artificial barrier shall be imposed to prevent any teacher of outstanding and conspicuous merit, whether now in the system or hereafter to be employed, from reaching any step on the salary schedule. Should the impossible or the improbable happen and in the course of years various percentage levels be filled it, of course, would be possible for the Board of Public Education to increase the necessary and liberal percentage limitations now imposed."

In another set of resolutions also unanimously adopted, the board extended its thanks to the citizens' committee for its interest in the school teacher problem and complimented the members for their "efforts to apply to the teaching profession those principles long recognized in business and controlling in other professions, whereby superior service is recognized and suitably rewarded."

CLAIMS RESULTS WERE AMAZING!

Pittsburgh Mother, and Daughter, Nine Years Old, Vastly Helped by Ten Herbs.

"Although I have taken Ten Herbs only a short time the results have been amazing," was the recent statement of Mrs. Viola Moslander, 5 Ellington Street, Mt. Washington, Pittsburgh, to the Ten Herbs Man, who is at May's Main Store, 529 Liberty Avenue, Pittsburgh, where he is daily demonstrating this famous new herbal compound to crowds of men and women.

MRS. VIOLA MOSLANDER

"For two years I had suffered with my stomach," Mrs. Moslander continued. "Everything I ate formed gas and caused me to bloat. The gas pains around my heart caused me great suffering. There were terrible aches and pains over my entire body. Sometimes I was unable to retain my food. I was troubled with shortness of breath. Finally I became so nervous I could not get proper rest at night. I would get out of bed and walk the floor for hours and in the morning would feel completely worn out. At times I was bothered with dizziness.

"I started taking Ten Herbs, and now am able to eat anything I wish without having gas, bloating or pains. Dizziness is gone, and my nerves are steady. I sleep fine and naturally feel rested when morning comes. My nine-year-old daughter seemed to have weak kidneys. I gave her Ten Herbs and it helped her wonderfully. I trust that everyone who reads this statement will believe it. I feel sure that all who are suffering as I was will find prompt relief if they will give Ten Herbs a trial."

Not a day passes but that men and women of this section report how Ten Herbs helped them back to glorious health by ridding them of ailments from disorders of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels. Ten Herbs also is a splendid tonic for persons of all ages.

The Ten Herbs Man is at May's Main Store, 529 Liberty Avenue, Pittsburgh, where he is daily meeting the public and explaining the results of this medicine.

RESCUE BALKED FOR MAN TRAPPED ON ALPINE PEAK

GRENOBLE, France, Dec. 18.—(AP.)—Rescue which approached within shouting distance yesterday, of Jean Douboin, marooned on the top of Helmet's Peak was driven back by the snow and steep ascent leaving him to face a second night of exposure. There was grave doubt whether he could survive.

Mademoiselle Yvonne Renoux, his only companion, succumbed to the cold last night and Douboin's hands were frozen. Three rescue parties of experienced Alpinists, working from three different directions, strove all day to reach the Lyons' newspaperman. They fought their way upward inch by inch, using every resource of mountaineering science, but all to no purpose. Night fell with their goal unattained although they had approached near enough to shout encouragement to the man freezing only a few hundred feet above them.

Splendid Recipe To Stop A Cough That "Hangs On"

The best cough remedy that money could buy, can easily be made at home. It saves money and gives you the most reliable, quick-acting medicine you ever used. The way it takes hold of stubborn coughs and chest colds, giving immediate relief, is astonishing.

Any druggist can supply you with 2½ ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a pint bottle, and fill up with plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey. It's no trouble at all to mix, and when you once use it you will never be without it. Keeps perfectly and tastes good—children really like it.

It is surprising how quickly this home-made remedy loosens the germ-laden phlegm, and soothes and heals the inflamed membranes. At the same time, it is absorbed into the blood, where it acts directly on the bronchial tubes, and helps the system throw off the whole trouble. Even those severe coughs which usually follow the "flu", are promptly ended.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway Pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form. Nothing known in medicine is more helpful in cases of severe coughs, chest colds and bronchial troubles.

Do not accept a substitute for Pinex. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

DRY VIOLATOR ILL IN JAIL

Ben L. Moses, Shadyside druggist, serving a 60-day sentence in the county jail for violating the prohibition law, is in poor physical condition and should be placed in a hospital, according to affidavits of two physicians, attached to a petition filed in Federal Court.

Upon a motion by Attorney Edward G. Coll a rule was granted by Judge R. M. Gibson upon United States Attorney John D. Meyer to show cause why Moses should not be removed to a hospital. Because of his physical condition Moses, the petition cites, is unable to stand the rigors of jail imprisonment.

Dr. Orlanda Fouse and Dr. David L. Simons advised placing him in a hospital, and said he had been under their care since 1925. Dr. Fouse said that confinement in jail would make him a confirmed invalid and Dr. Simons said Moses should be in a hospital where he could receive proper surgical attention.

Moses was sentenced Friday when he pleaded guilty to an indictment charging him with selling whisky unlawfully while he was operating the drug store of the Young Drug Company, Center avenue and Craig street.

Five Big Circuses Form New Combine

PONCA CITY, Okla., Dec. 18.—(AP.)—A transaction described as one of the largest in circus history was concluded at the 101 Ranch, near here, last night in the formation of the American Circus Corporation, a combination of five of the country's leading circus organizations.

The Hagenbeck - Wallace, the Sells-Floto, the Sparks, the John Robinson and the 101 Ranch shows were brought together, under the holding company. It was declared improbable that the individual make-up of any of the shows will be affected.

Smith Renomination Termed 'Unthinkable'

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—(INS.)—The renomination of Gov. Alfred E. Smith by the Democratic party in 1932 is unthinkable, Representative Gilbert, Democrat, of Kentucky, declared on the floor of the House yesterday in a speech analyzing the situation confronting his party. Gilbert himself was swept out of office in the Hoover landslide.

Smith was described as a most able man, but Gilbert said he represented views with which the people are not in harmony. Prohibition has come to stay, Gilbert asserted, and the Democratic party may as well face that fact.

Voorhis, 99, Renamed For Election Board

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—(AP.)—John R. Voorhis, 99-year-old grand sachem of Tammany Hall, braved a cold rain last night to hear himself recommended to the Board of Aldermen for another two-year term as commissioner of elections.

Mr. Voorhis has been president of the board continuously since 1919.

IS IT YOUR BUSINESS —OR OURS?

Suppose the Stock Fire Insurance companies had not fostered fire prevention.

Suppose they had followed the selfish principle that, no matter how great the destruction of property, rates could be adjusted accordingly.

What then would have been America's record of loss by fire?

Frightful enough it is—in spite of the efforts of the Stock Fire Insurance companies, working through the National Board of Fire Underwriters and its departments of Building Construction, Public Fire Protection, Engineering, the Arson Bureau, Underwriters' Laboratories, and other avenues of activity.

The reduction of the fire waste or the loss of life by fire is not primarily an insurance problem. The Stock Fire Insurance companies must charge for insurance on a basis sufficient to cover losses and operating expenses.

Therefore—viewing the situation from their selfish interests only—they need be no more concerned than are other industries in working toward a reduction of the fire waste.

However, for the welfare of the country as a whole the 229 Stock Fire Insurance companies which transact the great bulk of the fire insurance business voluntarily undertook the task of heading up the forces opposed to the destruction of life and property by fire.

The results have been encouraging. People are building better. Obvious hazards are being removed. But there is pressing need for further improvement.

Future progress in this work depends largely upon the degree of cooperation extended by you and others in the use of available safety devices and measures, and in the elimination of the many known hazards which continue to threaten life and property.

Interesting Views of World of Amusements in Words and Pictures

THAT MAN MOISSI AT THE PITT KNOWS ALL THE TRICKS OF ACTOR'S TRADE

By GEORGE SEIBEL.

NOT since the elder Salvini and Sir Henry Irving has Pittsburgh had an opportunity to welcome so distinguished a star of the European stage as last night, when Herr Alexander Moissi made his appearance at the Pitt Theater in that tragic Tolstoyan harikari which we know as "Redemption," while the Europeans know it as "The Living Corpse." John Barrymore has played it and the old Irving Place Theater in New York evoked shudders with it, and now this man Moissi squeezes the last thrill and the ultimate gasp out of it. Yes, it is Tolstoy—that explains much. The old reprobate who became a religious monomaniac has taken another Slavic soul and impaled it upon his analytic lancet. The result is a long series of agonized squirmings and then a leap into Nirvana. What these Tolstoyan Slavic souls need is more starch in their food to stiffen their backbone.

But the great power of this play lies in the opportunity it gives to the actor of Fedya. Just as Magda allures every emotional actress, so Fedya has a fascination for every actor with a soul to reveal and a voice to let out. That describes Herr Moissi. He has yards and yards of soul—he has bales and bales of voice. Few actors so well equipped as this man have trod the boards. He knows all the tricks of the actor's trade, but he has behind them a reverse of racial and individual power that sometimes has the effect of an opiate and sometimes of a trumpet blast.

Moissi is a master.

Transparent of temperament, so that the slightest murmur of his inner feeling shines through every look and gesture, he is also dowered with a voice that has Wagnerian polyphony. There is never a harsh note in it, and sometimes it has the softness of the zephyr, and sometimes it has the electric sonority of thunder. His German is as musical as any Italian. There is no voice like it on the American stage, and probably few on the other side. His diction is marvelous—clear and intelligent without a hint of nasality or slurring—what a pity we shall not see his Hamlet here!

There is one profound difference between him and John Barrymore. The Fedya of Barrymore never forgot that he was the matinee idol of the American stage. Moissi always remembers that he is the Fedya of old Tolstoy, disreputable and weak, though lovable and sincere. We have no doubt about his dishrag soul. He is not a hero on his afternoon out. That is the greatest of Herr Moissi—he is Fedya as Tolstoy knew him and painted him.

But it must not be thought that Herr Moissi is a star, and that he is surrounded by a cloud of average actors. Such first-class ensemble work has not been seen here since the Moscow Players. There is an actor named Friedrich Kuhne, who takes three different parts in the course of the play—a physician, an informer, and a magistrate—and makes each of them a marvelous character study. There is Wilhelm Dregelneann, who plays the drunkard with superb humor. There is Karl Ludwig Diehl, who portrays Karenin with luminous sincerity. One might list all the names, for that matter; they are all in the atmosphere and live their parts.

The women, too—the gushing Sasha of Irmgard Richter, the calculating mother of Emilie Unda, the high-strung Lisa of Charlotte Schultz, the passionate Masha of Lydia Li, the aristocratic Anna Dimitrievna of Johanna Terwin—all deserve plaudits for the manner in which they brought out every point in their characters as limned by Tolstoy. He painted his Russians as he knew them, and these actors and actresses give us every wrinkle and every wart. Here are souls in the pillory—Slavic souls, drugged with drink or conscience, seesawing between the crucifix and the gypsies.

The production has the Rembrandt effect of chiaroscuro that is Max Reinhardt's supreme achievement in stagecraft. The pictures live. They impress us like the Night Watch—composition, expression, color, light. But the pictures of Rembrandt have no voice and no tears. These people show their breaking hearts upon the stage, they bring us closer to humanity, and above the pictures soars the glorious voice of Moissi like organ music out of higher spheres. Not since Salvini and Irving has any actor come to Pittsburgh who ranks with this man.

PLAYERS SEEN IN FLESH AND SHADOW IN THEATERS

Fred Allen, comedian, in "Polly," new musical comedy being presented in the Alvin.

June Walker is featured in "The Bachelor Father," Nixon.

Alexander Moissi as he appears in "Redemption," dramatic offering in the Pitt.

Betty Compson and George Bancroft in "The Docks of New York," screen drama in the Stanley Theater.

Ruth Taylor has the leading feminine role in "Just Married," Penn film farce.

"POLLY" WINS IN ALVIN PREMIER

By CLARENCE L. GRUNDISH

Arthur Hammerstein, making Pittsburgh the scene of the premier of his newest musical comedy, "Polly," crowds the Alvin stage with elegance and talent. Keen stepping chorus girls fill the eye, capable singing and clowning principals invade the ear. Like a three-ring circus, something is doing every minute—or almost. But there the comparison ends, for the Hammerstein piece has showmanship and class never dreamed of on circus lots; showmanship and class that isn't so common on the musical stage either—even in these "arty" days of showmaking. But then you expect big things of the man who displayed "Rose Marie."

To head the "Polly" cast, the producer brought from London that somewhat mysterious personality—and all rather charming—who appears under the name of June. You'll laugh with her when she dramatically declaims, "Oh, where's my child, my baby," and is handed a submissive little Pekingese. And maybe you'll be sorry with her when, suitcase in hand and forlorn, she passes from the stage singing a repeat of Little Bo-Peep, one of the hit songs of the production.

And right here a little gossip. At the close of the first act, a gay array of roses was presented to June. 'Twas said they were the gift of a lord—or some such nobleman—from far-away England, who followed the actress here and was in the audience last night.

But on with the show. A gala company is in support of the star. There's the versatile Harry K. Morton, with his clowning and trick dance steps, and there's Inez Courtney, the Betty of the piece, whose charm and personality scream over the footlights. And she has talent of the capital "T" kind. Then there's that ingenious comedian, Fred Allen, in the role of a newspaper reporter, who is working on an invention to eliminate drooping asparagus and who lets the quips fall—quite rapidly—where they may.

Nor must we overlook John Hundley, who is the hero of the piece. John has talent, looks and a voice. And so we forgave him last night for keeping June waiting early in the second act and for eventually arriving on the scene with his shoe strings untied. And there are numerous others, too, those clever dancing boys, Will and Gus; the liquor-loving Frank McCormack, David Breen Joan Carter-Waddell Lucy Monroe and so on

ROUGH CHAP STANLEY STAR

If the most you expect of a George Bancroft picture is the thrill of seeing the man who stands alone on the screen when it comes to "knocking 'em about a bit," you'll get a big kick out of portrayal of a stoker in "The Docks of New York," photoplay feature in the Stanley. There also is authenticity in the waterfront atmosphere, picturized in a faultless manner, but the story itself has little appeal, although artistically presented. Bancroft's depiction of brute strength is accented with such a scornful attitude toward all and with such a cock-sureness of self and certainty that it will answer him on all occasions, that it is the outstanding thing in this picture. And his self-assurance serves to make him human in the end, when he comes back after deserting a girl he had married as the lark of a sailor with a night ashore. Previously he had saved her when she attempted to end a sorry life in a watery grave. Betty Compson plays the girl adequately but without special distinction. Mme. Baclanova, Mitchell Lewis and Gustav von Seyffertitz all give strong character portraits. The bill also includes an overture, organlogue, Vitaphone comedy with specialties and talking news pictures, including a view of King Alfonzo of Spain, in which his majesty speaks to America. It is a pleasing novelty.

Academy Bill Has Comedy

"Mischief Makers," burlesque in the Academy, presents specialties and travesties by members of a company in which Bob Startzman, comedian, is featured. He appears in several bits and sketches in which merriment is the basis. Ed Lalor, Billy Lee and Arthur Mallon also are prominent in the skits. Ruth Price, in a leading feminine role, is featured in a vocal specialty, "Low Down." Bobbette Eckard also offers specialties. Betty June Lee and her artist model girls present a special dancing number. As is usual in productions of the kind, the chorus also is much in evidence.

BUGS BAER Says

THE Western Union sends its annual booklet of snappy Christmas greetings.

The big dot and dash corporation encloses exactly forty different ways of shooting glad tidings.

ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

The forty-first and gladdest, of course, is sending the happy information collect.

Which enables you to wish your pal a prosperous New Year minus the cost of the telegram.

He then manipulates the articles and by-laws by wishing you success with reversed charges.

The W. U. saves you the trouble of thinking.

Writing a telegram is almost a profession.

First, you think of what you are going to say. Then you think you won't.

After pulling and tugging with your short history of nothing for thirty minutes, the only appropriate gift you can think of is a waste basket.

That is why the W. U. booklet is very handy. You point to No. 34 and say, "send that."

No. 34 reads, "Taking the privilege of an old friend I send you this Christmas something altogether personal and selective which the Western Union has devised for perplexed givers."

Just think of how happy everybody will be with a telegram in his stocking.

In return you get No. 12. "The shops have so many beautiful things, it's bewildering. So I'll leave the selection to you. Merry Christmas."

In this telegram the sender refuses the responsibility of being implicated in the selection of your gift.

And on Christmas eve we will gather around the fireplace and see who can read the loudest telegram.

'The Bachelor Father' At Nixon Scoring Hit With Its Frankness

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

"The Bachelor Father," presented in the Nixon last night by David Belasco, is a comedy by Edward Childs Carpenter that can be labeled deliciously sophisticated. It is a parcel of frankness containing the pure gem of charm. In point of frankness it is shocking but the shock is that of a stuffed glove—or a glove stuffed with down—and what would be jolting to the senses were the theme handled less artistically merely stimulates good humor and provides an evening of thought and of laughter.

The bachelor father of the Carpenter play, a certain Sir Basil, is chided into assuming something like a paternal interest in offspring he never has seen, so he packs off a solicitor to see their mothers in various parts of the world. He would do something for his children in addition to the financial support his riches has enabled him to give to all but one of his former sweethearts, and that one would accept nothing. The solicitor finds an English boy and a daughter of an opera singer in Italy, also a motherless daughter of a vaudeville actress in New York.

When the first mentioned young persons arrive at the ancestral halls of their aristocratic father in England he is not on hand and they are left to find out their relationship as chance offers. Then comes the American girl, who is introduced to the others by the solicitor. They discuss the situation and decide they will stick together and that all will leave if they do not like their father. At this point Sir Basil returns and the young folks are sent out into the garden while their arrival is announced to him. And he is in no good humor because a fishing trip has been interrupted, for Sir Basil is a sportsman. He is all for sending them all packing and is a little nonplussed when he learns that they may go without being sent if they do not approve of him.

Introductions follow in which his dictatorial attitude meets with resentment, voiced by the American girl, tacitly accepted by the others as their spokesmen, and they decide they will depart. A solicitor has to earn his pay so he induces them to give consideration to the matter and they retire for a "conference." The upshot of it is that Miss America, as chairman of the board, announces they seem to have characteristics their father does not like, and he has some they do not admire, but they will try him out for a week on probation.

At last night's performance the part of Sir Basil was not played by C. Aubrey Smith, who created the role. He arrived in Pittsburgh ill and Thomas Reynolds assumed the task of characterizing the bachelor father, which he did with such artistry that one might easily imagine that he it was who played it nightly. June Walker was the American girl, a wise little chit whose wisdom did not decrease her winsomeness and whose observations on the strange situation were a source of constant laughter. The solicitor was the business-like and romantic impression of Geoffrey Kerr, a young actor whose work pleased. Rex O'Malley and Adriana Dori also did well in the other juvenile parts.

Talk and Liquor in Film Show at Grand

"Dry Martini," a movietone screen drama of Parisian life, brings entertainment to the Aldine this week. The plot concerns a gay American, living in Paris, who is visited by a daughter he has not seen for eight or so years. He tones down his mode to conform with what he thinks will meet his daughter's approval. But he finds that his daughter has plenty of modern ideas. Mary Anstor portrays the heroine. The cast includes Matt Moore, Jocelyn Lee, Sally Eilers, Albert Conti and John Trevor. There are several specialties on the sound screen, including Shaw and Lee, who step out as a couple of Beau Brummels and dispense nonsense in song and chatter. Ulis and Clark, from the musical comedy stage, also present a film skit, "In Dutch." Then there is an amusing Our Gang comedy, with sound effects. George Dewey Washington, Negro tenor, is heard and seen also.

Dancing Wins Favor With Penn Audiences

The King of Spain talks very good English to the audience at the Penn Theater in the Movietone News, and invites them all to come to Spain. They won't see a better stage show there than at the Penn. The dance acts this week are exceptionally good—Maureen and Sonny do some human pinwheel stunts that are startling. Even more spectacular is the performance of Evans and Perez on a pole and some juggling feats with colored globes. A burlesque Apache dance proves very funny, and a coon, with drumsticks gets rhythms out of everything except the curbstone outside. As for the film comedy, "Just Married," Anne Nichols is responsible for it and it is very diverting, as might be expected from the author of "Abie's Irish Rose." But it isn't very novel stuff—the drunken man getting on board the boat and waking up in the stateroom with a woman in the other bed. It is done without offense by Ruth Taylor and James Hall, with Lila Lee and Harrison Ford seconding their efforts. Elias Breeskin, Dick Leibert and Teddy Joyce supplied the musical interludes of the program as acceptably as always.

Charles Ray Appears At Sheridan Square

"The Midnight Taxi" has brought melodrama and rum-runners to the Grand screen. There's lots of action—and some comedy—to the story, which concerns the trip of Los Angeles rum-runners to Vancouver to negotiate for a ship load of booze. Tom Dugan stutters through a number of talking sequences in a way that wins the laughs. Helene Costello portrays the heroine and Antonio Moreno, who operates a fleet of rum-carrying taxis, does the heroics. The screen also offers several sound specialties and a comedy.

Parisian Life Shown On Screen at Penn

Charles Ray, motion picture actor, is appearing in person in the Sheridan Square this week as the feature of the three-day vaudeville bill. Charlie, who is far better than the usual run of screen stars who try their talents behind the vaudeville footlights, sings a number of songs and appears, for a time, in his well-known country boy makeup. The photoplay feature is "The Red Dance," with Dolores Del Rio and Charlie Farrell. Other stage acts include Douglas and Claire, in old and new dances, and Murand and Girton, cyclists. Lillian Watson and Roy Byron appear in a comedy skit, "Too Late," and the Caul Sisters and Helene Wright present "A Cycle of Life."

War, Crooks, Feature Picture at the Harris

Rod La Rocque swaggers, staggers and dances on the Harris screen in the photoplay, "Captain Swagger," offered with Photophone sound effects. It is an entertaining picture, with some novel episodes. Rod is first seen as a daring, swaggering American aviator with the French forces. He brings down a famous German ace, only to rescue him later as the German plane bursts into flames as it hits the earth. For this show of gallantry, the enemy ace presents Rod with a revolver. And this revolver plays a prominent part in the story that follows—with the scenes shifting to gay Broadway, where Rod reappears as a swaggering idler and the German ace turns up as a gentleman gunman. A girl, played by Sue Carol, has a lot to do with the romance. Rod, as usual, does a nice piece of acting. Another screen feature is a talking skit, "They're Coming to Get Me," featuring Chic Sales. The stage headliner is Francis Renault, feminine impersonator, who displays some new fashions and offers witty talk. The Six Danton Shaws perform intricate feats on bicycles. Marty White song and dance comedian, and Stewart and Olive, who also show some steps—old and new—are on the vaudeville bill. An organlogue and other film entertainment also is offered. And we mustn't forget Santa Claus. He's appearing every afternoon with a greeting for the children.

RAPID SPREAD OF INFLUENZA NOTED IN ALL STATES

Every Father and Mother Should Help to Prevent Further Increase.

A large increase of influenza has been noted during the past week—200,000 cases have already been officially reported, which means there are at least a million stricken down with the "flu" today.

LOOK OUT FOR COLDS

Look out for colds—even mild colds in the head and throat.

Don't let them get down into the chest and lungs.

Don't go out if you are feeling sick.

Influenza, grippe, pneumonia or other serious sickness may develop.

To break up a cold quickly take a steaming hot cupful of Bulgarian Herb Tea.

This pure herb remedy increases the circulation, heats the chilled blood and moves the poisons out of your system. During the 1918 epidemic this steaming hot tea taken at bedtime proved the best known home remedy.

HOW TO PREVENT COLDS AND GRIPPE

The rich juices brewed from the precious herbs contained in Bulgarian Herb Tea, taken at least twice a week, is the best known way to keep your system healthy and in good order so you will be able to prevent the cold and influenza germs from getting in their deadly work.

BETTER TO BE SURE THAN SORRY

Don't wait until tomorrow. It may then be too late. The deadly germs of colds and influenza work fast and are no respecter of persons. Young and old are being stricken down alike. Go to your druggist and get a box of Bulgarian Herb Tea today so you or any member of your family will be prepared for that cold of tomorrow.

Our Daily Short Story

The Pewter Mug

By LOUISE P. ARMSTRONG.

THE son and daughter of old Peter Schultz did not arrive in Camden in time to attend his funeral. Living in Atlanta, it was impossible for them to reach Virginia any earlier, but they told Tom Winston how grateful they both were for all that had been done for their father in his last days.

"I confess we were somewhat surprised this morning when the court appointed you administrator of the estate," Elliott Schultz continued to address the young lawyer. "But Sue and I want to assure you we're delighted to have you. And anything we can do to help you in any matters—"

"That's very kind of you," Tom Winston said. He was, in fact, relieved, for he had thought Elliott might resent his appointment, and the further fact that under orders from Judge Evans he had already taken charge.

He had searched the Schultz home, accompanied by Dudley Payne, the adopted son of old Peter, and had there found a will. It had been tucked away with a number of ancient deeds and abstracts in a drawer of a disreputable looking desk in Peter's bedroom. "Hullo, here's a will!" Tom had exclaimed.

Dudley Payne had hurried to his side, raised his hand suddenly and tried to snatch the bit of paper from his fingers. Tom had folded it carefully and put it away in his breast pocket. "That'll come later," he had said in a dry tone.

Tom Winston hadn't liked the way Dudley had snatched at the old man's will; he was vaguely disappointed, for he was beginning to be fond of the boy. Old Peter himself had been fond of Dudley, though he had endeavored to conceal it under his silent, taciturn manner. Peter had gotten Dudley from a home the year after Elliott and Sue had gone to live in Atlanta and it hadn't seemed likely they would come back to the old home. Elliott had a fine position in a bank, Sue married a commission merchant. So old Peter had adopted the 12-year-old boy for company and to help him about the place.

The first winter after the adoption everyone was astonished when Dudley was allowed to attend the town school. "He's that set on book-learnin'," Peter had gruffly explained. "I told him to go, but he's got to make himself useful about the farm in the mornings and afternoons. He must pay for his keep!"

Dudley had worked hard; sometimes Peter would say a grudging word of praise of the boy, but mostly he would bitterly complain of the expense of keeping one who was of so little use. Nevertheless, Dudley continued his education, and he was about to complete his senior year when old Peter was stricken.

"And after all I've done for that scamp," Peter whined to a sympathetic neighbor, "he sulks at having to stay home, now that I'm flat on my back! This morning he talked of goin' to college—can you beat that? High notions he's got, and he might as well get over 'em, for when I'm up he's going to start plowin'."

Most of the townpeople had the impression that Dudley Payne was a sulky youngster, ungrateful for what old man Schultz had done for him. But Judge Evans tartly contradicted popular opinion. "He's helped Peter a lot more, I imagine, that Peter lets us know," the judge observed. "Can't expect too much of a boy."

Tom Winston had agreed with the judge until the little incident of the will. And then Dudley came to Tom's law office that morning after the Schultz brother and sister had left. He stood awkwardly near the door until invited to have a chair. "Something you want to see me about, Dudley?" Tom asked pleasantly.

"Yes, sir," the boy affirmed. "I—I suppose you've read Uncle Peter's will?"

"Certainly," Tom replied, gazing in astonishment at the boy's flushed face.

"Could—could you tell me if he left me as much as $250, sir?"

"No, indeed," Tom said angrily. "You've no right to ask that. You, Mr. Elliott and his sister will hear the will read tomorrow morning at the farmhouse. Can't you wait until then for what's coming to you?"

Dudley Payne arose uncertainly to his feet. "Yes," he said. "I suppose I'll have to, sir." Then he bolted for the door.

It was raining in torrents the next day. The country roads were muddy, and Tom Winston had difficulty in driving the scant two miles to the Schultz farm. The farm comprised a 25-acre tract of what should have been valuable land, but in the last five years Peter had allowed most of it to grow to broom-sedge. It would cost a bit to reclaim the land. Tom wondered just what would be the reaction of the Schultz brother and sister, to say nothing of the adopted son who hadn't even troubled to hide his mercenary spirit, when they all found that old Peter's investments had dwindled so considerably.

They were waiting in the front room, the parlor, clustered around the fire. Dudley Payne was slunk in a chair on the edge of the hearth in a rather dejected attitude.

"Before you begin," Elliott said, "I just want it understood that Sue and I intend to stand by our rights. We'll be just, of course, we'll pay all debts, but we won't be flim-flammed out of what's ours by right."

Dudley Payne looked up to scowl darkly.

Tom shrugged his shoulders. What a bunch of jackals—fighting over a dead man's bones! Get the sordid business over with as soon as possible. He pulled the will from his pocket and unfolded it. "It's my duty as administrator to see that all just debts are paid," he said. "But I'm not concerned, Mr. Schultz, as to what you do with your inheritance."

"Uncle Peter never tried to wriggle out of a just debt!"

Both Tom and Elliott Schultz started, turned to look inquiringly at Dudley Payne.

"Go ahead and read the will," Elliott said. "Don't mind him."

And then Tom read the will. Peter Schultz had left the farm to his son and daughter, "for what you can make of it," the old man had written, "and because folks might talk if I cut you off penniless." And to the adopted son, Dudley, he had left nothing but an old pewter mug that sat on the chimney-piece, and the junk it contains."

Elliott laughed out unpleasantly, and Tom Winston shivered at the sound. "But he doesn't say anything about his investments," Elliott said.

"I've made careful search," Tom told him, "and only discovered about $250 in first mortgage bonds."

"Just what he owed Sam Hilton," Dudley exclaimed. "He was saving it to pay...."

"I'll not recognize that claim," Elliott said emphatically. "He holds no note."

"But I saw Uncle Dudley borrow the money....and he would want you to be honest about his affairs! He told me just before he died to get you to pay Sam. And that was what I wanted to know about the will, Mr. Winston, when Elliott refused...."

"If you saw Mr. Schultz borrow the money a note isn't necessary," Tom said. "You and he can prove the debt, and I, as administrator of the estate, will pay it."

A look of exultation came into the face of the little adopted son of Peter Schultz. "Thank heaven," he cried. "Uncle Peter would be glad to know that!"

Tom looked at the boy, too touched and awed to speak, but Elliott brushed him aside, and strode to the chimney-place, pulled down the ugly old pewter mug.

"You infernal, meddlesome nobody" he cried wrathfully. "Here's your share in the old man's estate—take it and get out of here."

Dudley reached for the pewter mug, but as Elliott thrust it at him it slipped from his fingers and fell with a thud on the bare pine floor. And out of its mouth rolled a wad of paper bills.

"Look!" the boy cried, down on his knees picking them up. Elliott and his sister were too stunned to do anything but stare open-mouthed, as Tom took the bills from Dudley and counted them carefully.

"Three thousand dollars, Dudley," the young lawyer finally said. "Your heritage from old Mr. Schultz—the pewter mug and all it contained!"

"For my college course," the boy said, and his voice broke. "He really intended to send me—after all!"

U. S. CALLS RUM TRIAL JURY

The United States government has renewed its attack against the Pittsburgh liquor ring.

The government attorney was noncommittal as to specific cases he will list for trial.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Dec. 18.—(AP.)—The Peoples Natural Gas Company, of Pittsburgh, was directed by the Dauphin County court yesterday to pay $1,209 to the State of Pennsylvania as payment due on corporation loan tax of the company for 1924.

In dismissing an appeal from the payment by the gas company, the court decided that the $5 deposit required of certain prospective consumers should be included as indebtedness of the company. The company in its appeal took the opposite view.

COOLIDGE SURE TO SIGN DAM BILL, BELIEF

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—(AP.)—Chairman Smith of the House Irrigation Committee and Representative Swing (Rep.), California, co-author of the Boulder Canyon bill, conferred with President Coolidge today and later said that they were "hopeful" that he would sign the measure.

Their plan was to call the bill up in the House under privileged status, for consideration of the Senate amendments.

Smith said the President had not expressed dissatisfaction with any of the Senate amendments. For that reason and because of the previously expressed sympathy of the President for the proposal, Smith said he felt hopeful that the chief executive would approve the bill in its present form.

Mr. Swing said he understood that Representative Douglas (Dem.), Arizona, and Representative Leatherwood (Rep.), Utah, would oppose adoption of the Senate amendments.

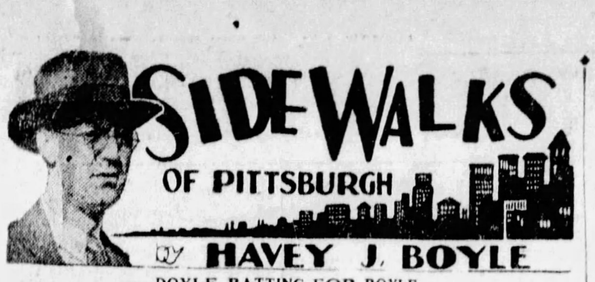
TUESDAY, DECEMBER 18, 1928



—DOYLE BATTING FOR BOYLE—

FOOTBALL officials are an interesting group. Something like 15 young men of varying professions make up the Pittsburgh chapter and nearly each member has had unusual experience.

Dexter Very, newly-elected president of the local chapter, rose to a position of prominence through dint of perseverance and a fine physique. Dexter was reared in an orphan school of Western Pennsylvania, but he had a natural push that knew no cessation until the goal was attained.

* * *

VERY'S grid exploits with the other homeless kids were of such a pronounced nature he was sent to a preparatory school where he was told he could "wait on table" to work his way through. But he ran afoul of coaches who did not give him a "tumble."

* * *

One night the scrubs were not working well and Very was called into action. Dex was sore and in the next 30 minutes he almost ruined the varsity. He passed around the food that night with a better feeling. The coaches finally were awake to the fact that they had a star, and not long after Dex had a job which did not call for table duty. He was listed as assistant trainer or something to that effect, but it was only a title.

EVENTUALLY Very reached State College and better treatment. And Dex didn't do a thing to a lot of "All-American" halfbacks in the succeeding three years. His end play made him stand out as one of the best; when he began to officiate he learned that his prestige as a player, added to ability, gave him opportunities of an unusual nature. He travels far and wide.

* * *

Dr. Charles Quailey, former Pitt star, is one of the new members of the order. Now that he is an alderman, Quailey gets a lot of practice without getting off the hardwood floors of his temple of justice. Observers declare the doctor has a quaint but effective way of dealing out 50-50 tickets in the squabbles that reach his court. He is not keen for sending unfortunates to jail, but he finds it quite hard to refrain from decorating some of the "fresh" offenders with an occasional black eye.

SPEAKING of football, did you ever hear of the "touchdown" made by Danny Benjamin, crack sports cameraman of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, that is not listed in the books? Jock Sutherland and others who had a closeup of this event like to tell about it when they fan.

Gibby Welch co-starred with Danny in this big sprint. It was the opening kick-off of the Nebraska-Pitt game of last year. Danny was well down the field to get a "shot" at the first play of the game. Welch, you will recall, caught the ball somewhere near the five-yard line. Gibby started back, but realizing that he was running into the whole enemy club he reversed his field. The movement took the runner away from the camera, and Danny insisted on getting that picture.

Welch, meantime, was starting out on an 80-yard sprint. Benjamin anticipated such a dash, got a little jump on the Panther and headed for the opposite goal line. Imagine Gibby's surprise when in romping over the marker he saw Danny snapping his picture. A day or two later, Welch met the cameraman.

"How in the dickens did you beat me up the field?" he asked Benjamin in wonder.

And then it was disclosed that Danny, as a boy in Wales, competed against Arthur Duffy and other famous sprinters.

BUILDING FRICK PARK WALL WITH HISTORIC BRICKS

Sam DeFiori here builds a trail in Frick Park, latest of Pittsburgh's municipal parks, with stones taken from the old Swisshelm home, torn down on Swisshelm farm, from which Swissvale borough takes its name. Director Edward G. Lang (inset), Department of Public Works, heads the park construction.

FIRST SHELTER HOUSE IN FRICK PARK ERECTED

This is the first shelter house, near Indian Stone, to be completed in Frick Park. Construction work to make the park ready for picknickers will require several years. James Moore (inset) is superintendent of the Bureau of Parks, part of Director Lang's Department of Public Works.

CITY TURNING FRICK WOODS INTO PARK

The improvement program for Frick Woods is under way, James Moore, superintendent of city parks and public property, told The Sun-Telegraph today.

Workmen are cutting a road for motorists through the woods with entrances at Beechwood boulevard and Braddock avenue, although the road will not be completed for another year at least, Moore said.

However, the superintendent did promise that two play areas would be ready for the younger generation next summer, with facilities for baseball and tennis. One is near Forbes street and Braddock avenue, the other at Reynolds street.

Public Works Director Edward G. Lang said that several years would be required to complete this improvement program for the 370 acres given to the city by the late H. C. Frick.

CRIPPLED TOTS KIWANIS GUESTS

John C. Hiteshew, borough manager of Sewickley, was named president of the Sewickley Kiwanis Club at the annual election of the organization held last night in the Dorian Club, Sewickley. He succeeds Glenn Cope. Forty crippled children from the Sewickley Fresh Air Home were guests at the dinner. They were entertained with motion pictures furnished by William Wheat.

The other officers elected were: Vice president, Dr. J. B. Crooks; treasurer, William G. Davis; district trustee, Glenn Cope, and directors, Dr. Charles Boyd, Dr. W. C. Martin, R. R. Moses, Raymond Connelly, Henry Goodband, Fred McMillen and Dr. G. E. McComb.

JOHN DALZELL'S $406,870 ESTATE IS DISTRIBUTED

Approximately 160 different securities figured in the estate of the late John Dalzell, a former member of Congress, according to a decree of distribution filed in Orphan's Court, showing $406,870 as the amount to be distributed.

The beneficiaries of the estate include William B. Dalzell, Samuel Dalzell and Robert D. Dalzell, sons and Elizabeth D. Dunn, a daughter of Mr. Dalzell, champion of tariff protection for many years. The list of securities held were in the main in amounts of less than 100 shares, where the securities represented stocks. The amount available for distribution is distributed equally among the four children named.

Pay Too Small, Chided by Wife, He Says

His wife told him she was tired of him because he could not make enough money to keep her, so William Green, 2911 Home avenue, Overbrook, wants a divorce from Elizabeth Green. The libellant's case was heard by Judge Joseph M. Swearingen, of Common Pleas Court, Green informing the court he had made several attempts to reconcile his troubles with his wife, but she would not listen to him. The Greens were married in 1923, when Mrs. Green was only 17.

WILKINSBURG POLICE SEEK MORE PAY

Declaring that under the present rate of pay they are scarcely able to meet household running expenses, members of the police force of Wilkinsburg have appealed to the borough council for increases in their salaries.

It is declared that in the winter months and especially the period near the holiday season, the work of the officers, because of the activities of thieves and other law-breakers, is exceptionally heavy and that the work done is out of proportion to the salaries received. Under the present rate of pay the chief receives $225, the lieutenant $225 monthly and the sergeants and patrolmen $5.50 a day.

Six Seconds For Safety

"After the wreck, there comes a reckoning," says the Pittsburgh Motor Club in its safety campaign to keep the sorrow of death and injury from Pittsburgh homes this Christmas.

The campaign is carried on through the medium of safety "wise cracks," which may be easily remembered during that important six seconds necessary to prevent an accident.

Bill Rogers Says

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.

The best informed man in America wrote me this today in a letter, so I get paid for it. Mr. Brisbane says:

"Will, the Prince obeyed orders in not taking a plane. The King is a link to the past, and must stick to the past. The airplane is a link to the future. He still drivers to Parliament in a carriage. Once the duty of every Britisher was to obey the King. Now it's the King's business to obey the prime minister, who represents every Britisher and improvement."

I don't care how careful Premier Baldwin was, I still claim he should have flew, or flown (whatever it is in English) and I bet the Prince will tell you so, too.

Yours, WILL.

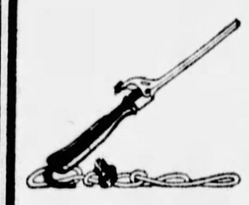
Here's the most worthwhile gift you could give—a Westinghouse Vacuum Cleaner. It cleans by the famous super-suction method, drawing out deeply imbedded dirt and grime—which means better cleaning, quicker cleaning and easier cleaning.

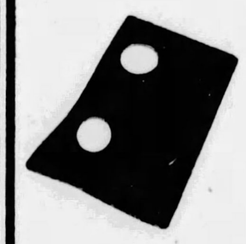


A gift of usefulness and beauty that is a daily reminder of the giver. This nickel-plated curling iron with its cream colored handle is perfectly at home on any dressing table. Price, including silk covered tinsel cord and detachable plug, $2.65.

Artistic design and graceful proportions make this new Wentworth Waffle Iron a most welcome gift. The convenient handle opens the griddle when pulled down. Price, with six-foot detachable flexible cord and separable attachment plug, $16.00.

For the boy or man who turns a corner of the cellar or garage into an electrical laboratory and who likes to experiment with things electrical, the Westinghouse Voltmeter will be a welcome gift. The radio fan will enjoy it too. Price, $4.50.

The home artisan, man or boy, who makes a hobby of his shop will welcome the gift of a Westinghouse Motor. You know he will have a lot of fun, hooking it up and using it to run the power appliances he uses.



If there's someone on your list who is building a radio set of his own, he'll recognize the sterling worth of Westinghouse Micarta for the panels. No material is easier to work with or better fortified to carry a heavy load of accessories.

RAINBOW CHASING

Madge Learns That June Accompanied Michael On His Trip

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Madge Sayre, pretty and young, awakens on the morning of her twenty-first birthday rebelling against the dinginess of the New York apartment she shares with her father, an unsuccessful inventor. She craves thrills and the joys and luxuries of life. She meets handsome Carroll Dudley, artist and aviator, at a party given by Frances Storrs, a friend. He pursuades her to pose for him and after professing his love for her, which she accepts, it develops that he is already married. Added to this he exhibits her picture at a party in violation of his promise not to do so. Madge, blind with rage, cuts the canvas to ribbons and rushes from his studio. She is struck by the automobile of Michael Winchester, scion of an old and wealthy New York and Virginia family. In the hospital she finds herself surrounded by every attention the Winchester millions can give her, and more too, as young Winchester falls in love with her. Winchester sends her to Atlantic City to recuperate. When she returns Winchester begs her to dine with him at his home, after which he proposes to her. She finds herself in his arms, consenting, if he wants her, knowing that she doesn't love him. She is still in love with Dudley. The wedding was a great event. It was a great moment in the life of thrills that Madge once longed for until the moment of departure on the honeymoon. From the window of the car she waves to the cheering throng and then not five feet away meets the bitter smile of Carroll Dudley. They arrive at the Winchester homestead in Virginia. The next day Madge, astride a spirited Arab, loses control of the animal which runs wild toward the steep banks of a creek. Michael races alongside and halts the steed on the bank of the creek. Madge loves him more for his bravery. A barrier of misunderstanding which neither is able to surmount arises. To relieve the situation they return to Michael's palatial Long Island estate. There he receives a cable to go to his sister in England. He fails to ask Madge to accompany him.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

BUT he had only been gone 15 minutes before Madge relented; she could not let him go like this! At least she must see him off.

She gave rapid orders for Collins and her own car, but it was another 10 minutes before she was ready to start.

"Step on it, Collins," Madge ordered, as she sank back against the cushions of the low-swung, cream-and-silver touring car. "Mr. Winchester has half an hour start on us, but you must get me to the Berengaria before she sails."

"I'll try, Ma'am," Collins called back. "But they got the Mercedes, and Mr. Winchester likes to travel. But I'll get you to the pier before he sails."

Collins was as good as his word. He let Madge out of the car a full 25 minutes before the great ship was due to sail.

Red tape threatened to impede her progress, but Madge found that the use of her name—the magic name of Winchester—cut this very effectively.

Presently she was on the little stretch of reserved deck that led to Michael's luxurious suite. She heard his laughter. Then he was not alone! Suddenly she felt shy. She had done a dramatic and slightly theatrical thing. She must see who was with Michael, and she peeped through the open door.

"You are just the same, June!" Michael was bantering. "Have another drink—you would anyway, you know."

Michael was entertaining June Wilson. Madge would have recognized her anywhere from her photographs even if Michael had not called her by name.

She remembered what old Mrs. Van Tyn had said—how it had been planned that these two should marry.

She would not face them. It would be too cheap, and Michael might think that she had been spying on him. She turned and quickly made her way off the great vessel. Collins was waiting for her, and she told him to take her home.

Well, she was not a society girl, Madge reflected bitterly as she sped homeward. She felt a strange, angry humility. She must have failed as Michael Winchester's wife. That was self-evident. Obviously he had not wanted her to go with him to England, and had planned all the time to travel with June Wilson. For all Madge knew, the news about the Duchess of Penndale might have been an excuse. Funny, that! And the cablegram had arrived on the day they had returned from the south.

More intimate things now became clear to her. In some way she had failed to attract Michael's passion. That was it! He loved June Wilson. Hurt and miserable as well as angry, she flung out of the car as it stopped before her door at last.

But as she entered the huge house and noticed lights everywhere, all thoughts of Michael and of her jealousy were driven from her. For, to her amazement, a uniformed nurse was crossing the hall.

"Oh, Mrs. Winchester," the nurse warned her in a coldly efficient manner. "You must prepare for a shock. Your father, Mr. Sayre, had a stroke yesterday evening, and you ought to know that the doctors hold out no hope of recovery."

Madge was staggered by the news.

"When did this happen?" she demanded.

"Just after you had driven away, Mrs. Winchester," the nurse explained.

"The doctor—" Madge began.

"The servants summoned the local physician," the nurse went on. "Dr. Sanderson called New York, and Dr. Dunlop and Dr. Tudor motored out immediately."

Madge could not help but reflect, even at that dark moment, on how efficiently the golden machine took charge of any crisis. The greatest men in medical New York arrived mechanically to meet this emergency. Yet—and here tears of love for her father brimmed in her eyes—even the machine of gold seemed incapable of saving his life. No hope, the nurse had said. . . . Rich and poor meet on common ground when death drew near.

Madge ran upstairs and was admitted into the sick room. The three physicians were talking in low voices at the foot of the bed in which the silent figure lay.

On her entrance, they introduced themselves, and spoke in long technical terms which meant nothing to Madge.

"You can't save him?" she asked almost fiercely.

More technicalities. More long medical terms, out of which emerged the fact that despite their skill, their reputations and the wealth at the patient's command, nothing could be done for him.

"It is a question of hours, Mrs. Winchester," Dr. Tudor told her.

She was kneeling by the bed, looking across at her father's face.

"Oh, father, don't you know me?" she asked tearfully. "It's Madge."

"It is possible he may recognize you just before the end," Dr. Tudor said. "I don't think it likely, but he may."

Madge did not leave the room at all that day. She sat, tears blinding her, beside the bed. She sat there uselessly, for he did not know her, and then as the sun began to set, Jonathan Sayre opened his eyes. It seemed to Madge that he recognized her, but she could not be sure.

"Father, father!" she cried.

But those eyes had closed again, and the nurse, bending over the bed, presently told Madge that they would never see again. Jonathan Sayre had gone home to rest.

Madge went to her own room, knowing that the machine of gold had failed her.

She was too tense to sleep, despite the fact that she had been up all the previous night. Too tense to weep. Too tense to do anything but sit at her window and look across the sea. Her father . . . gone.

Never before had Madge felt so utterly alone. Her father dead. Michael — flirting with another woman on board an ocean-going liner. Carroll—but she must not think of Carroll.

At last tears came, and when the storm had swept through her she permitted Anna to prepare her bath, to get her into bed, where finally she slept.

When she awakened, she found that the machine had taken care of everything and that Michael had been informed and had wireleased back:

"MADGE MY DEAR WHAT CAN I SAY STOP I WILL RETURN ON THE NEXT BOAT BUT I WANT YOU TO KNOW MEANWHILE THAT MY LOVE AND SYMPATHY BRIDGE THE MILES BETWEEN US STOP HAVE INSTRUCTED AGENTS TO RELIEVE YOU OF ALL DETAILS AND I WILL BE WITH YOU AS SOON AS I CAN LAND AND RECROSS STOP I SHALL A[illegible] REMEMBER YOUR F[illegible] IN TERMS OF AFFEC- T[illegible] GRATITUDE AND IT B[illegible] MY HEART THAT CIRCUMSTANCES KEEP ME FROM YOUR SIDE WHEN YOU NEED ME MOST (Signed) MICHAEL"

Madge put down the radiogram with a cold smile. How perfectly Michael always behaved—as regards outward appearances! The radiogram was so correctly worded, and perhaps, she reflected bitterly as she crumpled the flimsy form, a few minutes after he had dispatched it, he was again in June Wilson's arms.

Madge sent Anna for her secretary, a severely-spectacled young woman with efficiency written all over her face.

"Will you send this radiogram to Mr. Winchester, Miss Cameron?" she requested, and went on to dictate:

"THANK YOU FOR YOUR MESSAGE BUT I INSIST THAT YOU DO NOT RETURN UNTIL YOU HAVE COMPLETED YOUR MISSION STOP YOU COULD NOT DO ANYTHING IF YOU WERE HERE AND IT WOULD ONLY ADD TO MY ANXIETY TO THINK THAT I INTERFERED WITH YOUR AFFAIRS AND CAUSED YOU TO RETURN NEEDLESSLY STOP I AM SINCERE WHEN I SAY THAT AT THIS TIME I WOULD REALLY PREFER TO BE ADONE AND SHALL BE QUITE ALL RIGHT SO PLEASE KEEP TO YOUR ORIGINAL PLANS (Signed) MADGE."

In the days that followed, Madge stayed a great deal in her own room. It was raining furiously on the day of the funeral, so that she did not go, and was glad of the excuse. She refused to associate the solemn and awful pomp of the whole thing with the memory of her father. Neither did she assume black garb, as Jonathan Sayre hated the trappings and outward signs of mourning.

But, unable to bear the lonely splendor of her Long Island home, and as Frances was unable to come out and stay with her, Madge gave orders and had the Murray Hill house prepared for her return.

There were hundreds of people to whom she might have turned, but they all belonged to the new life. They were Michael's friends, and to Madge mere acquaintances, it seemed now that she had only one friend of her own, the homely, practical Frances, whose loyalty always remained.

Behind her back, servants raised inquiring eyebrows. Who was this new Mrs. Winchester who could return to her New York residence during the month of July, when all the world of fashion had fled?

But back in the old-fashioned city mansion. She felt happier. Frances came to dinner the night of her return, and she pointed out the dignified old chair on which Michael had persuaded her to sit before he proposed to her.

"And on the day after tomorrow, Frances," Madge said synically, "I shall have been a happy bride for exactly a month. A month! And my bridegroom is probably honeymooning in England with another woman. You must admit that some Southerners can hustle!"

"I think you're suffering with a martyr-complex," Frances said with her usual directness, as she lighted her pipe.

Later in the evening Madge begged Frances to come and stay with her.

"I can't, my dear," Frances refused. "I am a working woman and I am set in my ways. I wouldn't know how to get to work in the morning with all this luxury to hinder me."

The next day Madge spent in an orgy of shopping, only to find that there was very little fun in it because there was nothing she really needed.

That evening she was bored to extinction, and she was desperate from sorrow and disillusionment. Added to it all, the loneliness! She began to pity herself as "the poor little rich girl," so that the following afternoon, she decided that she could not bear it any longer.

Ordering her town car, an exquisite example of the coachmaker's art, Madge drove to a theater, feeling that a play would cheer her up. She was assigned a seat far back in the house, so that when the curtain went up on the scene of a moonlighted garden, Madge was in almost complete darkness.

She had noticed that the seat next to her was vacant, and now a man was sitting down in it. Madge sensed that he was peering at her through the gloom. Was some cheap masher daring to contemplate speaking to her?

Then through the dark came an impassioned whisper:

"Ecstasy! Ecstasy!"

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Snow Flurries Chase That "No Christmas Spirit" Feeling

HOW many times during the last couple of weeks have you heard someone say "I have absolutely no Christmas spirit this year." The unseasonably warm weather may have had something to do with it, so perhaps today's snow will make us feel a bit more "Christmasy"—a bit more like making some of the numberless plans and preparations that invariably accompany the holidays.

There are some folks, though, who are making plans to have a generously-laden Santa Claus pay a visit to some of their less fortunate fellow beings. I've heard about a Christmas party being arranged for Thursday afternoon for the patients at the Eye and Ear Hospital, with the Dispensary Aid Society acting as host—or should I say hostess? There is going to be an entertainment and, of course, there will be refreshments. And Santa Claus, in the person of LeMoyne Pace, will distribute gifts to the children, naturally, being the chief recipients.

Mrs. George A. Kelly, III is president of the society, and she is being assisted by Mrs. Thomas G. McCutcheon, Jr., Mrs. Sidney A. Stewart, Mrs. J. Shirley Austin, Mrs. James B. Blair, Catherine Sturdam, Mrs. John W. J. Bissell, Mrs. W. W. Blair, Jr., Mrs. Paul Dickey, Eleanor Croft, Margaret Stewart and Elizabeth Levy.

THIS is a busy day for the debutantes. First of all, there's the luncheon which Mrs. James Kelso Boyd, of North avenue, Wilkinsburg, is giving in the Hotel Schenley for Ruth Gamble. Masses of poinsettias decorate the table, at which places are laid for 16 guests.

Then, later in the afternoon, there is the tea which Mrs. S. Brainard West is giving at the Twentieth Century Club for her husband's sister, Helen West. Christmas greens have been used in decorating the club, with a screen of palms and ferns arranged behind the receiving line. Helen's mother, Mrs. Charles H. West, and the hostess's sister, Mrs. Howard H. Reineman, of Rochester, N. Y., are receiving with the débutante and her sisters-in-law. Helen is wearing an ensemble costume of black velvet, the skirt lined with silver, with a blouse of white and silver. Her hat is of black felt, trimmed with silver, and she is wearing a shoulder corsage of gardenias. The hostess is appearing in apple green velvet, with a rhinestone buckle draping the skirt, and her hat is of green felt. Her shoulder corsage is of yellow roses. The senior Mrs. West is gowned in wine red crepe, trimmed with matching velvet, and is wearing a hat to match, while Mrs. Reineman's frock is of gold brocade. She is wearing a gold hat to match.

There is just one tea table, placed in the dining room, and it is decorated with a basket of poinsettias and holly, flanked with red candles.

THE Pittsburgh Club cotillion is set for tonight, you will remember, and preceding it is the dinner which the Samuel Alfred McClungs will give in their home in Murrayhill avenue for Jane Alderdice.

I WANT to tell you something about the tea given yesterday afternoon by Mrs. Lulah W. Tinker and her daughters, Mrs. Paul Sexton Hardy and Mrs. Herbert Herr, Jr., in the Tinker home in South Dallas avenue.

There were two tea tables, one placed in the dining room and decorated with a bowl of American Beauty roses, pussywillow, white laces and heather, with green candles in silver holders. The other table, arranged in the breakfast room, had a centerpiece of holly, heather, calendula and yellow pompons, with yellow candles in crystal holders.

The hostess and her daughters received in the large drawing room. Mrs. Tinker wore black georgette velvet with a shoulder corsage of gardenias, while Mrs. Hardy appeared in violet chiffon with a corsage of tea roses and lillies of the valley. Mrs. Herr appeared in orchid blue crepe with a corsage of orchids and lillies of the valley, and another daughter, Betty Tinker, wore blue chiffon.

LISTEN in tonight between 7 and 7:15 o'clock, and you will hear an entertainment broadcast in the interests of the charity ball, set for December 27, by the Federation of Girls' School Societies. The program will be broadcast over WCAE, and in addition to piano music there will be banjo solos by W. Ford Moreland. Mrs. Ambrose Nevin Diehl, president of the federation, is going to talk, too, on plans for the ball.

ADDED to that long list of January wedding dates is January 26, which has been set by Elizabeth Roberts Buchanan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Roberts Buchanan, of Denniston avenue, for her marriage to Kenneth Edward Niemann, son of the A. Congress of Clubs Has Yule Festival

WITH pageantry, song and service, the Congress of Clubs celebrated its Christmas festival yesterday in the clubhouse. Luncheon tables were set in the auditorium and in the Outlook Alliance room, but the celebration was, of course, in the auditorium, from which tables were removed after the meal in order to make room for the overflow. Into the darkened auditorium came the choral members dressed in white and carrying lighted tapers. The singers marched to "Adeste Fideles" and sang one or two other numbers before being seated. Still by candle light, Mrs. Carl Coslowsky, Congress president, read from a New Testament that had come from the Holy Land and which was bound in olive wood. She initiated an impressive candle service, in which the department heads of the Congress participated, each lighting her candle to bear it later to the tables where tiny tapers stood at each place waiting to be set aflame from the larger ones.

After luncheon the pageant of the jewels, written and adapted by Mrs. B. E. Rodgers, was presented by Mrs. Elsie Breese Mitchell, Miss Sara Logan, Miss Ellen Wilcox, Mrs. Virgil L. Towner, Mrs. John Trautman, Jr., Mrs. Frances Schreiner Lane, Mrs. C. J. Bowlis and Mrs. J. A. Lashley, all typifying the mothers of various nations. The closing scene was a tableau representing the Madonna and Child with the adoring Magi. Mrs. Rodgers at the piano furnished musical accompaniment, the choral assisted and solos were sung by the majority of those in the pageant, Mrs. Mitchell and Miss Logan having important singing roles. Mrs. Mitchell also sang beautifully with the choral in the pre-luncheon ceremonies.

A LOVELY Christmas celebration was held yesterday by the Pittsburgh Literary and Musical Club in the Business Women's Club. Some old French carols which have been translated by Mrs. Harvey Gaul and set to music by Mr. Gaul were sung by Mrs. Arthur B. Siviter, and a group of modern French ones was presented by Miss Ruth Simmons, who accompanied Mrs. Siviter also. Miss Marjorie Pyfer accompanied Miss Simons. Mrs. J. R. McGregor contributed piano numbers. Continuing the study of Japan, the club heard a paper on the Korean question by Mrs. Harry G. Golden, one on Japanese literature written by Mrs. Clarence Tiers and read by Mrs. Adele Eggers Furniss, and an especially interesting one on Fujiyama by Mrs. Olive W. Kendall, a former president, who returned from her home in Scarsdale, N. Y., to be present yesterday. In her honor the program committee served tea.

ALFRED D. Pollock, includes Miss Jeanne Lloyd, Miss Eda McCoy, Mrs. E. E. Strassburger, Mrs. C. C. Mechling, Mrs. Fred R. Kleibacker, Mrs. W. D. Bowers, Miss Margaret Hannah and Mrs. W. W. Wentz.

Stark, Mrs. Carl Behrhorst, Mrs. James Gilliland, Mrs. Frank Graham, Mrs. Robert Cleland and Mrs. J. Andrew Gettig. The Western Pennsylvania committee held a luncheon Friday in McCreery's and had as the guest of honor Prof. William Starr Meyers, of Princeton. As a result of the local conference more than 1,000 resolutions have been received indorsing the Kellogg peace pact.

MISS MARGARET LINDSAY REBER, new president of the Wilson College Club of Pittsburgh, has asked Miss Elizabeth Clugston to act as chairman of the Christmas luncheon. This luncheon, an annual event of the holiday season, will be held in the Norse room of the Fort Pitt Hotel on Saturday, December 29.

SOLOS were presented by the Rev. J. Hoy McElhinney at yesterday's meeting of the Carnegie Monday Club, for which Mrs. W. W. Andrews, of Beechwood avenue, was hostess. Substituting for Miss Elva Bascom, who was unable to be present, Mrs. T. G. George read a Christmas story and readings were given by Carl Emerson Williams.

THE senior Wilkinsburg Woman's Club members were guests of the juniors last night in the Y. W. C. A. Community House. The program consisted of a particularly well done presentation of "Mimi Lights the Candle."

THE Christmas party arranged by the Pittsburgh Girls' Club for this week has been indefinitely postponed owing to illness among the club members. At the January business meeting, there will be election of officers for the coming year. Plans are under way for a January dance with Miss Cecelia McArdle and Miss Mary Louise Barry, joint chairmen. The gym class will resume its practice January 8, at the North School, under the supervision of Miss Jean Kelleher.

Church Singers to Be Heard in 'Messiah'

Several singers from Pittsburgh churches will take part in a Christmas program to be given Saturday night over WJAS. Parts of "The Messiah" will be presented by E. A. Sprague of the Third Presbyterian Church; Earl Mitchell, organist of the Shadyside Presbyterian Church; T. Reed Kennedy, of the Third Presbyterian Church; Patti-Rude Baldridge, of Christ Church; Miss Clara Huehn, of Friendship Avenue Presbyterian Church; Miss Sarah Logan and Mrs. Isabel Hoffman Cooper. It is expected that other singers will participate. The program has been arranged by Anne Griffiths.

A SPLENDID talk on the life and works of Charles Dickens was given yesterday before the Keystone Association for Historical Research by its president, Mrs. Dulcie Fiske Fairman. Miss Nellie Bender, violinist, and Miss Etta Bender, accompanist, presented musical numbers and played for assembly caroling, which was led by Mrs. Harriette Graffius. Holly decorated the luncheon tables.

THE Brighton Woman's Club will have its Christmas meeting Thursday of this week in the home of Mrs. H. J. Voegtly, Grenet street. There will be assembly caroling, Miss Anna Dietrich is to tell a Christmas story and at roll call the members will respond with Christmas thoughts. Gifts will be brought for the baskets which the club distributes to needy families.

uses a cup of SUGAR in boiling ham

A famous cook gives his recipe

A MAN, famous among his friends for his fine cooking, was asked the secret of his delicious boiled ham. He gave this simple recipe: Put a cupful of sugar in the water that boils an average size ham. Also one-half cup of vinegar. Try this and see how much it improves the taste and flavor of the ham.

Every good cook knows that there is no substitute for sugar in improving the enjoyment of other foods. Whether in preparing fresh vegetables, fruits or meats, sugar is the secret of successful cookery.

Sweetness is nature's perfect flavor. It is also the cheapest nutriment that you can buy.

Health comes from eating good foods, flavored to please the taste. Beware of extreme reducing diets. They are dangerous. Eminent medical authorities warn us that permanent injury often results from starvation diets.

Be sure that you and your children are properly nourished. Eat enough of varied foods, sweetened for enjoyment. The Sugar Institute.

FALLEN BRIDGE CHOKES RIVER IN TUBE CITY

County workmen were engaged today clearing the Monongahela River channel between Duquesne and McKeesport of the two spans of the old Riverton bridge, which collapsed last night. The bridge is being dismantled by county employes and supports had been loosened yesterday by the workmen.

A third span over the tracks of the Union Railroad on the river bank was in danger of falling, but was braced by county engineers who rushed to the scene. The bridge has been closed for several months and formerly was used by the Pittsburgh Railways Company.

Director Norman F Brown of the County Public Works Department was rushed to the scene in a motor boat. He was accompanied by several other engineers and the group spent most of the night there. Traffic lights were erected and boats were directed around the wreckage in the river.

Suit Case Stolen From Parked Auto

A suit case containing women's wearing apparel valued at $200 was stolen early today from the automobile of Dr. J. E. Jablonski, who has offices in the Fulton Building. The physician left his automobile parked in front of the Aldine Theater.

DARK BEAUTY -:- -:- In Praise of Brunettes -:- -:-

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

I HAVE before me a long, high, wide pile of letters. They are not heavy—letters aren't. But these have lain heavily as a kneeling elephant on my conscience. For they are reproachful missives from girls, little ones and big, asking why I don't make pics, more of them, of the girls who have dark hair and eyes. And they all wind up with—

"Don't you LIKE them? Don't you think they are beautiful, too? I think YOU must be a blonde yourself!"

My! My! And I wasn't conscious that my works of art were so rampant with blondes that I, too, was thought to prefer them, along with the gentlemen.

So here's to the dark, tempestuous beauty. Here's to the nut-brown sweetheart. Here's to the soft-eyed Madonna. The true-mother type, the girl with brown eyes.

"ANY beauty, so long as she's dark, is the beauty that suits me best. Maria Querida, Mary Alanna, Mari a Bella, la Belle Marie."

Love's Awakening

A Continuation of Love's Embers

By ADELE GARRISON

Madge a Witness to an Episode in the Love Drama

I KNEW that Lillian's offer to act as "innocent bystander" during my interview with Dicky was prompted only by a keen desire to aid me. She has no place in her mental make-up for anything like curiosity, and, in fact prefers not to know anything concerning the affairs of her friends. But though I dreaded meeting Dicky with no one else near me—not so much because I feared his anger as because my own wrath was so near the explosion point—something within me rebelled at having even this nearest friend of all beside me when I faced my husband.

"That's mighty sweet of you, dear," I said hesitantly—"but—"

Lillian put her hands on my shoulders and gave me a kindly but exasperated little shake.

"Since when have you had to throw an apology act to me?" she asked. "Run along and I was going to say, 'take your beating,' but I think I'd better say 'stage your bout,' for I'm betting on you to come out winner. But remember to get your body blows in early. And if you should need assistance, an SOS will bring yours truly on the run."

"I'll remember," I said laughing in spite of my low spirits as I went out of her room and down the corridor to my own. Knowing Dicky, I was sure that he would wait only until Katherine banished him from Junior's bedside to come to me and vent the anger left by our discussion earlier in the day. That his wrath had been quickened, intensified, by his jealousy of Philip Veritzen's lavish gifts to Junior, I was certain, and altogether it was a bad quarter of an hour which I spent in waiting for my late husband.

I was not gladdened either by a little scene I witnessed from my window which is on the side of the house next the lilac hedge and the tennis courts beyond. There is a wide gap in the lilac hedge, the entrance to the close clipped lawn surrounding the tennis courts, and through it I could see the four players, Mary, Noel, Princess Olina and Prince Georges, in spirited action, and as they are good players, their game was a pleasant thing to see. That Harry Underwood thought so was evident from his attitude. Seated on one of the garden benches at the side of the courts, he was leaning forward in what appeared to be exuberant approval of the players and the really clever shots they were making.

But Philip Veritzen by his side was exhibiting no enthusiasm. He sat bolt upright, his arms folded tightly across his chest, his chin drawn back into his collar, a posture well known to all his intimates. It is the one he assumes when he is exercising the "high justice, the middle and the low," upon some one of his subordinates, or when he is sitting in judgment upon some play which he has descended from his Olympian heights to hear.

I went to my desk and took my field glasses from their case. Then I went back to the window and trained them upon my employer's unsuspecting face. I saw at once that he was watching Mary Harrison's movements intently, and I shivered at a certain expression of relentlessness in his face. Chance had made Noel and Mary partners, and there was no mistaking the interest which the young violinist took in the girl so gallantly aiding him. He was the weakest of the four because of the injury to his arm from which he only recently had recovered, but as Mary was the best of the quartet, the game was fairly even.

My employer sat apparently motionless until the game was over and the opponents changed to the other side of the court for the next. Then he arose, walked over to Mary and touched her on the shoulder. He could have said but one or two words to her, for he went back to his seat almost immediately, but I saw the girl involuntarily shrink as if from a blow as he spoke. The next instant, however, she had pulled herself together, and I saw her turn toward Prince Georges with some laughing little speech, apparently a challenge. I was wild to know what Philip Veritzen had said to her, but I had no chance even for conjecture, for Dicky's impatient knock sounded upon my door.

Stuffed Apples

Wash and core six large apples deeply, fill the centers with mince meat that is highly seasoned the same as for pies. Set the apples in a buttered casserole dish, dust with sugar and mixed spices, add a sliced lemon and one-half cupful of water, cover and bake for half an hour. Melt a half cupful of maple syrup with a cupful of water, thicken with a little cornstarch and turn over the apples, uncover and cook 15 minutes.

Before Applying Polish

Always wipe furniture with a cloth wrung out of lukewarm water to which a little vinegar has been added and let it dry before applying polish. The vinegar and water will remove the dirt.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Bridal Attendants

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I am about to be married and I am in a difficult situation. Is it proper to have a divorced woman in the bridal party? I have a sister who is divorced and I was told that it is very improper to have a divorced woman attending at a formal church wedding. H. M.

UNLESS this is forbidden by the denomination of the church in which the ceremony is to be performed, there is no reason why you should not have a divorced woman in your wedding party.

Bride's Choice

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1. I am to be married soon, and my husband to be would like to have his married brother for best man, as his wife is to be matron of honor, but my friends think this is improper. Is this true? The groom has no other brother that could act as best man.

2. I am having two bridesmaids and one will have to walk out of the church with the best man, which is objected to, too. E. M.

INDEED far from being improper, this seems to me to be the perfect arrangement. That is, provided the one person in the world whom you wish to have for your matron of honor is the wife of your fiance's brother, and that the one person in the world that wishes to have for his best man is this married brother. Such a wedding party is a charming arrangement.

2. The objection in this case I "sustain" too. Nowadays it is supposed to be most out-of-date and uninteresting form for the members of the wedding party to be "paired." Except for the fact that the bride and groom walk down the aisle together, the other units of the wedding party walk as they did in the recessional, but in the reverse order. The maid or matron of honor walks alone, following the bride and groom. Then following her come the bridesmaids, walking together, two by two. And last the ushers, walking together, two by two. The best man does not walk in the recessional, going directly after the recessional has started to the vestry, where he gets the groom's hat and coat to take to the car at the front of the church.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Wednesday, December 19

FROM the sidereal operations of this day it is necessary to forecast a state of stubborn obstacles, postponements and delays. It will be difficult to make much progress under the unyielding influence of the square aspect of Saturn to the moon, a token of lack of opportunity, generaly unfavorable circumstances that thwart and hamper, affecting the health and depressing the spirits. Other testimonies show slow returns for persistent effort and also lack of harmony in personal affiliations.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a year in which dogged perseverance and hopeful anticipations for future action and returns for fidelity and merit are about all that may be expected. It is to be a time of obstruction and delay with persistency and diligence asked to postpone their fitting rewards. Safeguard the health and keep the spirits up.

A child born on this day should be given a good physical and intellectual training, with vigor and optimism the goal.

Delay is better than disaster.—Proverb.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Don't Neglect Your Child's First Teeth

WHEN the baby is born it is without teeth. One by one, or rather two by two, or in groups, they appear. The "cutting" or "eruption" of the teeth follows pretty closely certain rules.

DR. COPELAND

The teeth are in the jawbones all the time, but it takes time for them to develop in size and strength. In short, like the body itself, they must grow. When they get big enough, they crowd through the soft bone and finally cut their way through the gum.

The first of the teeth to appear are the two at the front and center of the lower jaw. These are called the "lower central incisors," and they appear when the baby is from six to nine months of age.

After the lower central pair come the upper incisors, not only the central ones, but also one on each side of the central pair, four in all. These are cut at about the twelfth month.

Then to match the upper group there appear two more lower incisors. By the time the baby is 14 or 15 months old there are eight front teeth, four on each jaw.

Within the next six or eight months a tooth appears at each side of the lower and upper groups. These four new teeth are called the "stomach teeth," or the "eye teeth," or the "canine teeth."

Next we find a double tooth appearing at the back of each jaw on both sides. Later the vacant spaces are filled in and by the time the child is two or two and one-half years old he is the proud possessor of 20 teeth.

Once in a great while a baby is born with a tooth or two. In some instances the teeth are cut very early and in others much later than the average time I have given.

The time of the teething is determined by the degree of nourishment and the general welfare of the child. So long as the child is strong and vigorous we need not worry about the teeth or about the teething. Many averages are broken by Nature's own way of dealing with the individual problems.

The 20 teeth I have described are the first teeth and in the course of time these will be replaced by the permanent teeth. At the age of 6 years or thereabouts the first of these appear. They are placed back of the baby molars. Sometimes they are called the "six-year molars."

Just because the first teeth are not to remain in is no reason why they should be neglected. They must be kept in repair so they will not drop out before the second teeth are ready. They are needed to help the development of their successors.

Cavities in the baby teeth require attention. If neglected, the decay may find its way through the first underlying permanent tooth.

The child should be taught to care for his teeth and the parents should see to it that the baby teeth are kept clean and in good condition.

Answers to Health Queries

M. T. Q.—How can I gain in weight?

2. What is the cause of granulated eyelids?

3. What is the cause of "nightmares?"

A.—Proper dieting and deep breathing is the secret. You should eat nourishing foods and have plenty of sleep and rest.

2. This condition is generally due to some infection. Bathe with mild solution of boracic acid several times a day and apply 1 per cent yellow oxide of mercury ointment at night. However, have eyes tested to see if glasses are needed.

3. Very often this is due to indigestion or intestinal disturbances. Proper diet and correct exercise will alleviate this trouble.

A. Q.—What can be done for enlarged veins on the back of the hands? Have had acid system caused by improper diet—will the condition of the hands improve now that the diet has been regulated?

A.—Many people have prominent veins on the backs of the hands and nothing can be done for this condition. In older persons this condition is often more pronounced.

SPORT COMMENT by JAMES J. LONG

SEVENTEEN PITCHERS FOR PIRATES

THE Dallas baseball club, of the Texas League, appears to have taken entirely too much for granted in announcing that it would get either Pitcher Walter Tauscher or Pitcher Lee Roy Mahaffey from the Pittsburgh club next spring.

Walter Tauscher

The statement made by Bob Tarleton, former Buccaneer scout and now business manager of the Steers, that an agreement to that effect had been reached was emphatically denied at Pirate headquarters.

It is admitted that the Pittsburgh club is required to give Dallas a flinger to complete the deal where Pitcher Homer Blankenship came to the Corsairs last fall, but no names ever were mentioned in the negotiations, and it is the privilege of the Pirate management, under the terms of the dicker, to decide what twirler shall be turned over to the Texans.

In other words, Dallas is to get a Pittsburgh pitcher, but will not be permitted to do the picking. That will be attended to by the Pittsburgh club after Manager Donie Bush has reached a decision as to what members of the spring slab staff are not to be retained.

BASEBALL men are not surprised at Tarleton's implied preference for Tauscher or Mahaffey, if he could get either of those right-handers, as the general impression is that both are good prospects. Tauscher, in particular, looks as if he may amount to something in time, and Mahaffey has improved at an encouraging rate since he was first brought up to the big show.

Dallas is not the only club that has a pitcher coming to it from the Pirates. At least two other deals for minor league timber call for the turning over of mound material. A twirler must be sent to the Portland (Ore.) club of the Pacific Coast League, along with Infielder Mack Hillis and cash, to complete payment for Pitcher Larry French, and when the purchase of Pitcher Steve Swetonic from the Indianapolis club, of the American Association, is closed, a boxman will be part of the price.

HOWEVER, the Bucs will have plenty of excess pitching talent after the spring training trip with which to meet their obligations. No club in the majors has more hurlers on its reservation list.

The Pittsburgh roster shows no fewer than 17 pitchers, counting Lee Meadows, who plans to try a comeback. In addition to Meadows, those being carried are Burleigh Grimes, Remy Kremer, Carmen Hill, Jess Petty, Fred Fussell, Ralph Dawson, Larry French, Henry Meine, Homer Blankenship, Gleen Spencer, Ervine Brame, Walter Tauscher, Lee Roy Mahaffey, Ralph Erickson, Leon Chagnon and Elmer Tutwiler.

Dave Bancroft

INDICATIONS are that one of the most famous of baseball's fading veterans will be forced into the obscurity of the bench by the transfer of Shortstop Glenn Wright from the Pirates to the Dodgers. A seat in the dugout appears to be the only thing open to Dave Bancroft, one of the greatest shortfielders of all time but now nearing the end of his string. It is planned to use Wright at shortstop, D'Arcy Flowers at second base and Billy Gilbert at third base, so that the once brilliant Banny will have to remain on the bench the greater part of the time unless he is sent to another club. It has been rumored that Bancroft might be tried at second base, but the strong finish made by Flowers at that position last season, with the refusal of Manager Robinson to consider giving him to Pittsburgh in the Wright deal, leads to the belief that the former Cardinal is booked to start at the keystone for the Dodgers.*

WRIGHT, by the way, has expressed himself as being perfectly satisfied with the deal that shifts him from Pittsburgh to Brooklyn. When asked by a Brooklyn newspaper for a statement on the trade, the former Pirate shortstop wired the following reply: "I would as soon, if not rather, play for Brooklyn than for any other club that the Pirates could have sent me to. I feel sure that the change will benefit my playing immensely."

In connection with the recent trade, a Brooklyn report says that Pitcher Petty is demanding the return of a sum approximately $1,000 deducted from his pay check last season when Manager Robinson suspended him. The southpaw, it is rumored, declares he will not report to the Pirates unless he is paid in full by the Robins.

ACCORDING to Petty, both Robinson and Vice President Steve McKeever, head of the other faction among the Brooklyn club stockholders, promised to remit the fine and return the money to

NEW DUKES, CAPTAIN AND COACH, SET FOR OPENER

BEN LUBIC, JR.

With a year of experience, gained as a sub on last season's Duke five, young Ben Lubic, nephew of the former Pitt star and Tech coach of the same name, is making a strong bid for a position in the 1928-29 Duquesne University quintet.

CAPT. ROSENBERG

Jock Rosenberg will lead the Dukes on the floor this winter. He is a star guard and a good all-round floor man. He also is a former Schenley High School star.

JOE PALAMONE

Palamone is another ambitious and promising andidate for a varsity position at Duquesne. He was a member of the crack Siano five last season in the P. & O. League, and has been showingg to good advantage at both a forward and a guard position.

COACH DAVIES

Charles (Chick) Davies is looking forward to another successful campaign at Duquesne. He has set his heart on winning back the Tri-State Conference title, which was wrested from the grasp of the Dukes by Westminster College last season. Davies has a veteran squad with which to work. The Dukes open the campaign with Ohio Northern here Friday night.

HARPSTER KEPT OUT OF EAST TEAM'S DRILL

By

Howard Harpster

All-America quarterback of Carnegie Tech and member of all-East team.

(Written Exclusively for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

IMLAY, Nev., Dec. 18.—The last day of the all-Eastern team's trip west passed quietly and, outside of a short and snappy workout at Ogden, nothing out of the ordinary happened. The squad has been divided into two teams, one consisting of the men from the Far East and the other of the men from the Middle West. At Ogden we made a stop for about half an hour, and the players, dressed in sweat clothes and football shoes, jumped off the train and had a good workout on the snow-covered ground adjoining the station. Because I still have a slight cold, Coach Kerr has kept me out of the practices, but I have had an opportunity to view the work from the side.

Howard Harpster

The boys look very good to me, and there is a snap and a punch to the workouts which indicate that the East team means business. Even at this early date the plays are running smoothly and the squad shows a world of speed.

We are due in San Francisco at 9 a. m. Tuesday and a practice is scheduled for the University of California stadium in the early afternoon.

The boys from the Pittsburgh district, Capt. Fox and Gatto of Pittsburgh, Capt. Aschman, W. & J.; Sweet and Letzelter, of Tech, are all feeling great. Gatto's injured shoulder is being treated daily and is rapidly rounding into shape. The big tackle says he will be ratin' to go by the twenty-ninth.

CHAMPION YANKEES TRAIL

By CHARLES J. DOYLE.

THE misleading trend often taken by fielding averages is exemplified in the official fielding averages of the American League for the 1928 season as given out for publication today.

The team fielding discloses that the Washington and Boston clubs are at the top of the heap in collective fielding. The Senators were barely able to finish in the first division while the Red Sox landed in the cellar.

The World Champion Yankees, on the other hand, were down close to the bottom in fielding. So once again M. Napoleon appears to have been right in advocating that a good offense is the best defense.

The figures, however, low consistency on the part of many individuals. Consider the case of Willie Kamm, star thirdsacker of the White Sox. Kamm was a jewel of consistency as he led the hot corner tenders with a mark of .977. He rose to fielding heights in not making a single misplay through a stretch of 74 games.

BISHOP, TODT STAR

Max Bishop, of the Athletics, led the second-sackers with Joey Sewell, of the Indians, topping the shortstops. Phil Todt, of the Red Sox, and Joe Judge ran a close race for first-base honors, the Boston gateway guardian having a one-point edge on the Washington veteran. West, of the Senators, Manush, of the Browns, and Combs, of the Yanks, were leaders in outfield play.

Mickey Cochrane, peppery receiver of the Athletics, led all competitors in the numbers of games played in, but fellows like Muddy Ruel and Pat Collins had better fielding averages than Mickey, who took part in 120 games.

HYATT PROVES STAR

By LESTER J. BIEDERMAN.

Special Correspondent.

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 17. —Chipper Cholly Hyatt, Pittsburgh's phantom floor dash, was the spark which ignited the burning desire of Red Carlson's Panthers to end their three-game losing streak at the hands of Western foes here this evening and his excellent floor play so inspired his mates, that they picked up a hard fought contest from Ohio State 34-26 and terminated the disastrous losing orgy before 3,000 fin bracing court fans.

Red Carlson, determined to break the losing proclivities of his Pitt proges, started his second squad against the Buckeyes, who defeated Penn Friday, but the Ohioans meted out such a tough battle that Hyatt along with Lew Cohen and Zehms were rushed into the fray. From the moment the two entered the game with the emphasis wholly on Pitt's floorwork, the Buckeyes battled valiantly and Hyatt rode on to both field goals.

OHIO TAKES LEAD

Ohio assumed a three-point lead and it was Pitt five minutes to watch the flying Bucks, but once that deficit was accomplished, Ohio remained in the rear. Ross Ferry, quarter-point-sized guard of the Panthers, amazed the throng here with his consistent and unquenchable dribbling, sometimes taking the ball the length of the floor and thus the only interruption came when a foul would be interposed. This boy stood out in the fine play of the Golden Panthers along with Mr. Hyatt's son, Cholly.

Ohio took plenty of shots all evening but failed to hit more than anything else. They locked the ball to the successfully with Pitt and time and again the Panthers

In the pocket billiard game, of course, the veteran Erwin Rudolph, former champ, confident in talk, but not reflected in his play; Frank

Lewis Leaves Ring, Purse Is Forfeited

TORONTO, Ont., Dec. 18.—(AP.)—Disgruntled over the actions of Referee Lou Marsh, Ted (Kid) Lewis, former welterweight champion of the world, stalked from the ring at the Coliseum here last night in the first round of his scheduled 10-round bout with Charley Belanger, of Winnipeg, Canadian lightheavyweight titleholder. Belanger was awarded the decision. Lewis' purse was withheld by the boxing commission, which announced it would be given to charity.

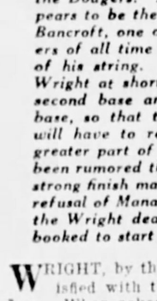
Charley Ellis Reporting Cue Tourneys for Sun-Telegraph

ANOTHER prominent figure in the local and national sporting world has joined the all-star sports staff of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph in the role of a correspondent covering an event on which he is an expert.



Charley Ellis

The newest addition is Charley Ellis, former world three-cushion champion, and now a billiard academy owner, who is reporting the world championship three-cushion and pocket billiard tournaments being played simultaneously in Orchestra Hall, Chicago. His first article appears in this issue.

The acquisition of Ellis for this assignment is just another indication of the up-to-the-minute caliber of the sports section of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, which also has Howard Harpster, all-America quarterback of Carnegie Tech, covering the East-West and Tournament of Roses football games on the Coast.

CAGE SEASON HERE OPENS FRIDAY

By JESS CARVER.

There will be no postponement of the opening of Pittsburgh collegiate basketball campaign, even though Pitt has called off its premier with Dartmouth. The Dukes are going to open up as per schedule, and will play Ohio Northern on the Bluff court Friday night.

When Pitt called off its contest with Dartmouth, which was on the books for Saturday, it was feared for a time that the Dukes would decide to shut up shop and thus deprive the boys of another excuse for staying out at night. But John

LOREN MAY COME BACK

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—(AP.)—Loren Murchison, former national sprint champion, who was unconscious for 21 days with cerebral spinal meningitis just a year ago, is making plans for a comeback. He paid a call on an old friend, Paavo Nurmi, at New York University and while there said he hoped to return to the track, "although probably not this winter."

LOADED MITTS CHARGED IN AMATEURS

By HARRY KECK, Sports Editor.

WHAT ho! What is this boxing business coming to when whispers of the evil days of yore are carried on the evening breezes, as was the case at Motor Square Garden last night, when Duke O'Hara, the silver-haired fox of McKeesport, was going around saying things, and not to himself, either?

Duke, as usual, had a number of boxers on the card, an amateur show topped off by an exhibition bout between Cuddy DeMarco and Jackie Murray, substituting for Jack Zivic, who is ill with a touch of influenza. The proceeds went to the orphans' Christmas fund. In the last bout of the 11 between amateurs, Duke was out after sweet revenge for Billy Wilson, his middleweight, who, incidentally, is a champion of parts although not yet 17 years old. Billy's opponent was Amos Dothard, Negro of the Superior Club, a dark gentleman, who only two weeks ago knocked Billy kicking in the first round of a bout in the Greater Pittsburgh championships at McKeesport, after which Billy went on to score victories in a heavier division.

Duke got that revenge last night, when Billy came back and won with a knockout in the second round. Dothard doing a fadeout from a light left to the chin after having been floored three times and rolling down twice in the first round. But let the Duke tell the behind-the-scenes story himself as he did as soon as the bout was over.

He was burning up, was the good Duke.

"They loaded up that bird's hands the first time he fought Billy," he declared indignantly. "Billy dropped him several times and he got up and swung an. It Billy just once and put the lights out for him. I was suspicious, for that hadn't happened before to Billy, who can take it with the best of them, so I decided to be on the look-out tonight. Before the bout, I came upon Dothard and his trainers in the dressing room and they had his hands taped up in such a fashion that it would have been kinder to have let him hit an opponent with a bludgeon. I told him to take it all off and start taping over again, and those birds with him threatened me. I had to offer to lick 'em all, one at a time, of course, before I could make them understand I wasn't kidding—and you can see for yourself what happened.

"NOW, understand me, I'm not saying they did or they didn't load up that Amos in that first fight with Billy—but I'm taking no chances. This Billy is a nice kid, and, while he's a great ring prospect, I'm trying to talk him into giving up the ring for a few years at least and going back to school. He's a fine football player and all-round athlete and it would be a pity to keep him in the ring at the expense of what he may lose by not completing his education, especially when other guys are getting so they're carrying more than their fists into the ring in an attempt to beat him."

As mentioned a few hundred words back, this fighting business is coming to a pretty pass when the oldtime methods are being dug up—and especially in the amateur ranks.

Despite the inability of Zivic to go through with his scheduled bout with DeMarco, his old rival, the show last night was a decided success. It drew out a good-sized crowd and the amateurs put a lot of spirit behind their efforts. The DeMarco-Murray bout was merely an exhibition with big gloves, as it was intended to be.

A PECULIAR knockout marked the battle between Russell Verge, of the Wilkes Club, and George Bretch, of the Twenty-seventh Ward A. C., the Greater Pittsburgh welterweight champion. Verge, boxing prettily, had all the better of the first round, and was leading in the second until he took a right on the chin and spun around helpless into Bretch's corner. Bretch followed him and hammered him to the floor and proceeded to continue the massage with Verge on his knees. The referee stopped the bout and awarded it to Bretch on a knockout, explaining that Verge had quit, but a more proper decision appeared to be a victory for Verge on a foul, for Bretsch plainly was out of order by all the rules in the book of Queensberry in hitting the helpless Verge while the latter was on the floor.

Regis Davis escaped a knockout by Pete Balint after being floored twice for the count of nine in the third round of their bout by hanging on to the finish. Other bouts resulted as follows: John Leonard defeated Eric Sirko, Nat Lifkin defeated Johnny Warner, A. Andrucci defeated Dan McCabe, Red Hartley defeated Earl Humphries, Carl Montalbano defeated Eddie Hebner, Skip Lehr defeated Tom Fairini, A. DeLuca defeated Bill Orrieth and Freddie Smith defeated J. Montalbano.

SANGOR, GROSS VICTIMS OF UPSETS

The boxing world today was quaking under two more upsets of the dope, which saw Joey Sangor, contender for the junior lightweight championship, knocked out in the second round by Armando Santiago, a Cuban, in Chicago, and Jack Gross, southpaw heavyweight of Philadelphia, knocked out in the tenth round by Al Walker, Negro of New York, at Philadelphia.

In recent weeks, Tuffy Griffiths has been knocked out by Jimmy Braddock, Jimmy McLarnin by Ray Miller and Knute Hansen by K. O. Christner, and Johnny Risko has been beaten by Jim Maloney, all upsets of the dope.

SANGOR KNOCKED OUT

CHICAGO, Dec. 18.—A boxer looked upon as a set-up in a warm-up bout preceding a match for the junior-lightweight title knocked Joey Sangor, of Milwaukee, in the second round here last night. The new ring hero is Armando Santiago, a Cuban boy of 20 years and little experience as a main-bouter. Trading punches with Sangor like a lumberjack throughout the first round, he clipped Joey on the jaw with a choppy right early in the second round and rendered the veteran groggy. Then he floored him for a count of nine and then for the full count, stunning a crowd of 10,000, which also saw Tommy Loughran, world light-heavyweight champion, easily defeat Big Boy Peterson in the 10-round main bout and Ted Ross knock out Shuffle Callahan in the seventh round after scoring six knockdowns.

"THROUGH," JOEY SAYS

MILWAUKEE, Dec. 18.—(AP.)—Joey Sangor, of Milwaukee, who was knocked out in two rounds by Armando Santiago, Cuban junior-lightweight, in a bout in Chicago last night is through, he said today. And this includes his scheduled bout with Ted Morgan, junior-lightweight champion in Milwaukee, January 1.

"I'm through with the fight game," was his comment. "All the money in the world cannot tempt me to sign for another fight. Yes, that means that my scheduled bout with Ted Morgan in Milwaukee New Year's afternoon, is off. Now I am ready to burn my fight togs and forget that I ever was a fighter."

GROSS ALSO STOPPED

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 18.—Jack Gross, southpaw heavyweight of Salem, N. J., who has been regarded as a leading contender among the younger big fellows, was knocked out here last night by Al Walker, of New York, in the final round of a 10-round battle at the Arena. Stanislaus Lonyza, the Chilean, knocked out Mickey Blair, of Camden, N. J., in the eighth round.

ANOTHER FOR CHOCOLATE

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—(INS.)—Kid Chocolate, Cuban bantamweight champion, who has yet to be defeated in his short but sensational ring career, gave Emil Paluso, of Salt Lake City, a terrific beating here last night, the Western battler taking in the eighth round via the technical knockout route. The game Salt Lake Bantam was in bad shape when the referee halted the bout.

Joe Glick defeated Petey Mack in a 10-round bout in Brooklyn.

GREENSBURG WINS

GREENSBURG, Pa., Dec. 18.—The hussy Kiski Prep quintet was unable to stem the tide of a fast-going Greensburg High School five and the Brown and White passers annexed their fifth straight victory here last night by a count of 41-23. The local team took an early lead and was never headed. Brilliant work of Brooks and Moore featured the locals win. Kiski lost many chances to score by inability to find the basket.

Aspinwall High Team Feted

ASPINWALL HIGH SCHOOL football team, Class B champion of Allegheny county and a big winner among its rival elevens over a three-year period, was feted last night by the Aspinwall Borough and school officials at a big banquet held in Webster Hall.

The clever grid warriors from up the Allegheny River were given to understand that the town is proud of them. The coaches, Arthur McComb and T. B. Dunbar, and the entire squad were paid heavy tributes by many speakers.

The toastmaster for the festive occasion was Burgess Louis Hagmaier, who was introduced by H. B. Conner, former president of the Borough Council.

The principal football address of the evening was given by Dr. J. H. Sutherland, head coach of the University of Pittsburgh. Dr. Sutherland gave the young and promising gridders a lot of wholesome advice which should stand in their stead.

Coach McComb also delivered an interesting talk, as did the captain of this year's team, Joe McNally, and Joe McCarthy, now of the Duquesne University squad, who was a captain of the Aspinwall team before joining up with the Dukes.

Burgess Hagmaier gave the squad the thanks of the town, and in doing so he reminded the youngsters that they were living in an exceptional borough.

Prof. F. D. Keboch, of Aspinwall High, paid a tribute to the gridders, especially for their classroom work, and the professor also lauded the coaches.

Other guests who were called upon for speeches were Harry Keck and Charles J. Doyle, of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

SOCCER DRAW ANNOUNCED

The draw for the second round of the National Amateur Cup competition and the filing of the protest by the Corinthians against the Clan Douglas team were the principal items of business transacted by the National Amateur Cup Committee at the Hotel Winton, Cleveland, last evening. Just as was expected, the best that the Corinthians got was a replay of the game, which is scheduled for December 29.

The committee found that the protest was not lodged according to the rules, that Douglas was not given a chance to withdraw Marshall from the game, for it was considered that Manager Masterton of Douglas was not aware that Marshall was a professional.

The game will be played at the Homewood playgrounds one week from Saturday. And will naturally be played as in the first instance, but without Marshall in the game.

The real item of interest was the draw for the second round, which is: Pittsburgh Celtics vs. Keystone; Glendale vs. Pittsburgh S. C.; Clan Douglas or Corinthians vs. Pittsburgh Rovers; Heidelberg Eagles vs. Heidelberg S. C.; Union Switch and Signal vs. Westinghouse.

The committee had a number of protests to settle, the protests coming from every district in the country. The committee was made up of John McEwan, Ohio State; Bill Angus, Ohio State, and Harry Fairfield, Western Pennsylvania.

The draw for the second round should produce some real battles. The meeting of the Heidelberg Eagles and the ex-national champions should give a thrill to the juniors around the Panhandle section.

Keystone will be up against a stiff problem at Lawrence Park, meeting the Celtics. The Green and White are good cup fighters. Pittsburgh will have to travel to Glendale for a Sunday game, and that should draw the greatest soccer crowd even in Glendale. But from the outlook, the best game of the draw should be at Swissvale where the Westinghouse club meets the Union Switch and Signal Ohio, Michigan and Western Pennsylvania, all are staging five contests in the second round.

SEASON OPENS

Holohan, the graduate manager and burre et oeuf man at Duquesne, announced last night that the ball game was "on" and would remain so—unless the entire club is stricken with the flu.

But the Dukes are to see action before Friday. Tomorrow night, Chick Davies will take his club to Butler for a game with the Collegian five of that place. The contest will be the second informal struggle of the pre-season campaign. Last week, the Red and Blue won over the Yimhaws on the Bluff.

Manager Holohan is about ready to finish up his football schedule for 1928. He is dickering at present with the Haskell Indians. The only thing that is holding up this game is the fact that the Injins want too much dough to play here. They ask for six grand to come to Pittsburgh. It didn't hurt them to ask for that much.

SUNNY PRICE, NOTICE

Sunny Price, the former football star is requested to call Penhurst 2831 after 6:30 p. m. and ask for Vensel.

KINGSLEY FIVE UPSETS DOPE IN LEAGUE

By JULIUS LEVIN.

NOT considered a strong contender of the Greater Pittsburgh Institutional League championship at the start of the season, Coach Fred Yetter's Kingsley House passers are going along in the even tenor of their ways defeating the best clubs in the loop and as a result are resting up among the leaders.

The Kingsley passers have played three league games to date and have given an excellent account of themselves, their only defeat coming by a margin of a single point. On the other hand one of the two victories credited them is a decisive triumph over the Young Men's Hebrew Association quintet, a team that is rated one of the best in local amateur circles.

Building his aggregation around Bucky Braccarelli and Palamone two veterans stars, Coach Yetter has succeeded in molding a speedy combination that is bound to finish high in the Greater Pittsburgh Institutional League race. The East Liberty passers thrive on a fast, passing attack and most of their opponents have been bewildered by the manner in which they have registered points.

Braccarelli and Palamone have contributed much to the success of Yetter's quintet to date. Both are experienced players and their presence in the lineup makes the team a tough one to defeat. Any team taking Kingsley House lightly this winter is going to be handed a rude surprise.

CEDER TO BOX SAYLOR AND DEMARCO

Rudy Ceder, the Tarentum welterweight, who is matched to box Cuddy DeMarco in the 10-round windup at Motor Square Garden Christmas afternoon, has decided to accept a battle with Young Saylor, of Charleroi, at Johnstown next Thursday evening, in addition to the local event. This will give him just five days between the clashes and he hesitated for a time about the advisability of taking the Flood City offer. He apparently believes he will come through unmarked against the clever Saylor and so will be in good trim for his meeting with DeMarco.

Mickey Hart, of New Kensington, will oppose Johnny Chiodo, of Johnstown, in the semi-final of the Johnstown show and Hugh Fetzer, of the North Side, now under the management of Billy Lewis, will meet Johnny Wildner in the second bout.

Charley Luck, of the North Side, has three of his boys on the card at Cumberland Friday night. Ray Braun meets Socko Treneman in the main bout, Johnny Michael boxes a foe named Griffiths in the semi-final, and Tommy Ward is on in a preliminary with Kid Rush.

Tom Malco, of Soho, former amateur star, and George Kerston, of McKeesport, have been matched for the second bout of the show at McKeesport Thursday night, which will be featured by a double windup of 10-rounders in which Dominick Profio will meet California Joe Garns and Johnny Carey will clash with Phil Scello.

Boxers anxious to join the Pittsburgh Lyceum team in A. A. U. competition are requested to attend a meeting called by the coach for 8:15 o'clock this evening at the Lyceum.

Johnny McGarvey, former matchmaker at Motor Square Garden, is ill at his home with an attack of influenza. He has been in bed since Saturday.

Jackie Rodgers, Negro bantamweight, is ready for action again, after a layoff of six weeks due to an injury, and will box Ian Bilttek in one of the bouts on the Christmas matinee card at Motor Square Garden and may meet Howard Mayberry in a return battle on New Year's Day. He also is matched with Mickey Hart at Sandusky, O., January 24.

ROCKNE TO SPEAK

HUNTINGTON, P., Dec. 18—Knute K. Rockne, Notre Dame football coach, will deliver the principal address at the Rotary Club's testimonial banquet to the Juniata College and Huntington High School football squads here tonight.

DUKES BEAT TARENTUM

The Duquesne University defeated the Allegheny Y. M. C. A. team on the Bluff floor last night, 61 to 19. Vernon and Rosenberg leading the attack.

DRIBBLES

No games being scheduled in the Allegheny County League tonight, the P. & O. loop will occupy the center of the basketball stage, the Greenfield Club of McKees Rocks invading McKeesport to meet the Alumni Club in the only game on the program.

The Knickerbockers, champions of the West Penn League, will have their hands full tonight when they meet Ken Loeffler's Geneva College quintet on the Forresters' hall court tonight. Loeffler is said to have one of the best teams in the Tri-State Conference this winter and it would not be surprising to see them vanquish the heralded Stripners. Next Saturday night Geneva plays Community House, A. A. U. champion, at Community House.

The Duquesne Lafayettes, two-time champions of the Allegheny County League, have Christmas week open at home for games with first-class teams. A game is desired and Duquesne, Pa., is handling the booking arrangements for Ed Minnick's smooth-working passers.

Peoples and Mellon National, two time-honored rivals, clash in the feature game in the Pittsburgh Bankers' League at Fifth Avenue High School tonight. In the other game, Real Estate meets Union Trust.

The H. H. Robertsons meet P. & L. E., and Kaufmanns clash with National Fireproofing in the two Commercial-Industrial League games carded at the South Side Market House tonight.

BUCS-AMERICANS CLASH; HERE THURSDAY

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—The New York Americans, the proud possessors of three straight triumphs, will attempt to add to their victory string at the expense of Benny Leonard's Pittsburgh Pirates at Madison Square Garden here tonight. Although they have maintained a fast pace since the opening of the season, Tommy Gorman's bespangled skaters appear to be getting better as the race wears on, and they are odds-on favorites to conquer the Bucs and strengthen their position at the crest of the Canadian Group of the National Hockey League.

Of four meetings with the Pirates last season the Americans gained nothing better than an even break. They won one battle, 1-0, lost to the Pittsburghers by 2-0, and the two other jousts were scoreless ties. But th Americans of this season are a greatly improved aggregation, an aggregation made up almost entirely of new material. Capt. Lionel Conacher, giant defense man, and Billy Burch, center, are the only regulars retained by Gorman. New men wh have played stellar roles in the Americans' "comeback" are Johnny Sheppard, former Detroit Cougar, Punch Broadbent, former Montreal Maroon, Roy Worters, former Pittsburgh Pirate, and Babe Dye and Rabbit McVeigh, formerly with the Chicago Hawks. Broadbent and Sheppard are the starting wingmen, and Dye and MVeigh are reserves of more than average ability. Dye, in fact, is one of the National League's greatest goal getters. He paces the loop in scoring until he was forced out with a broken leg last season.

GAMES TONIGHT.

Pittsburgh at N. Y. Americans.
Les Canadiens at Chicago.
Montreal at Ottawa.
Detroit at Boston.

Worters came to the Americans in exchange for Joe Miller and a bundle of cash a few weeks ago. Worters refused to sign a Pirate contract and his holdout tactics resulted in the swap.

After their clash here tonight the Pirates and Americans will move on to Pittsburgh for their second battle of the week, at Duquesne Garden Thursday night.

One of the features of this evening's engagement is to be the awarding of the Roosevelt Hotel Clean Play Trophy to Harold Darragh Pirate wingman. The Pittsburgh star holds the enviable record of having been penalized fewer times than any other player in the National League. The award is made annually. The probable lineups:

AMERICANS.		PIRATES.
Worters	G	Miller
Reis	D	McCaffery
Conacher	D	Hollway
Burch	C	Miller
Broadbent	W	Darragh
Sheppard	W	Cotton

The fireworks started at 1:30 with Taberski meeting Rudolph before a large and very enthusiastic audience. This town is sure strong for the green cloth game. Rudolph started like a real champ with a 42 in the first frame, wonderful stroke, keen eye and everything. He had every advantage with a commanding lead, several opportunities with his opponent going bad, but could not follow up this early good play and finally wilted late in the game and the silent Pole came from behind to score a hard-fought victory in a rather poorly played contest, 125 to 114, in 21 innings.

The second game of the afternoon saw Otto Reiselt crossing cues with Willie Hoppe at the three-cushion game. Otto won the lag and scored a beautiful five but it was plain he was not playing with his natural stroke, a fault he has usually displayed when battling with Hoppe. Otto normally has plenty of zip in his delivery, whereas Hoppe plays the drop game, that is first counting. Although Hoppe started very bad, poor hits, unable to avoid easy kisses, and off on angles, he pulled himself together after about 15 innings of indifferent play and looked like a champ thereafter, winning, 50 to 35, in 53 innings.

Greenleaf and Natallie were the contestants in the evening curtain raiser and this affair was horrible in every detail. Quality of play by both men was execrable. The champion's stalling caused the game to last for three hours and the crowd was considerable in doubt which was uppermost in his mind, acting or playing pocket billiards, both were terrible and he was the victor only because Natalie was worse, even though he scored in the neighborhood of 150 points, he lost more than 40 on scratches. The final count was 125 to 104, in 36 innings.

Layton, national champion, and Copulos were paired in the final event. This was one of the best matches ever played for the championship. Layton forged to the front at the half-way mark, holding Copulos almost scoreless. At this stage, the champ had a 10-point lead. Copulos electrified the crowd with a beautiful run of 11, the majority being difficult chances, and the applause was deafening as he counted the eleventh point, missing almost the same shot for his twelfth and placing him one point ahead in 29 innings, the score being 28 to 37.

Thus far there have been no bad shots, all misses being hairline. The balls have not rolled well for either player, however. Layton has had the shade on the breaks and now the score is tied at 47 in 32 innings. Great game, says I. Tied at 47 in 41 innings, and Layton gambled and won—50 to 48.

COCHRAN IN LEAD

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—(AP.)—Welker Cochran was leading Jake Schaefer by more than 600 points after the second block last night of their special 4,800-point 18.2 balkline billiards match here. The score was Cochran 860, Schaefer 186.

Forbes Gives the Facts on General Motors Rumor

By B. C. FORBES

DETROIT, Dec. 17.—All the talk about impending changes in the chairmanship and the presidency of General Motors has aroused nation-wide interest. I am now in a position to give the facts.

Pierre DuPont's six months' leave of absence from the chairmanship does not expire until February. Mr. DuPont has not yet announced definitely whether or not he intends to resume duty as chief executive of the world's largest motor enterprise. Even those close to him do not yet know what his decision will be. Everybody identified with the corporation is ardently hoping that he will return because there is no officer in the whole organization better fitted. Mr. DuPont has the happy faculty of being able to get along harmoniously with others. He is conspicuous for two things: his broad-gauge executive ability and his gentlemanliness.

SHOULD Mr. DuPont resume the chairmanship, no change whatsoever will be made in the lineup. Alfred P. Sloan will continue as president, for which position it is recognized by every man in the organization he is ideally fitted. Having enjoyed mechanical and engineering training, he knows every nut and bolt in every car turned out by General Motors. Not only so, but he early had to get out and hustle for orders to keep going the first plant he entered, one in which his father was heavily interested. Mr. Sloan, therefore, is master of both the production and the selling end of the vast business.

Equally important, he loves the work. He gives his whole life to it.

SHOULD Mr. DuPont disappoint his colleagues by deciding to ease his many responsibilities by withdrawing from the chairmanship, and should he not want to have, say, one of his brothers take his place, it will rest with the executive committee as a whole, but more especially with Mr. Sloan, to decide whether to leave the office of chairman vacant or to fill it. The probabilities are that no chairman would be named, at least for the present.

SHOULD, however, Mr. Sloan move up to the chairmanship, which is the chief executive position in the corporation, another president would, of course, be named to succeed him in the presidency.

In that event every effort would be made to induce Fred J. Fisher to shoulder the presidential burdens, although it is well understood that Mr. Fisher would much prefer to have things go on exactly as they going before Mr. DuPont was reluctantly granted a temporary leave of absence.

INSIDE the organization the main interest is in any possible change in the two principal offices, namely, the chairmanship and the presidency. Because of the tremendous publicity the newspapers accorded John J. Raskob's withdrawal from the chairmanship of the finance committee to become chairman of the National Democratic Committee, there has been a good deal of speculation among the public as to whether Mr. Raskob would rejoin General Motors in the very near future or whether he would continue his national political activities.

Mr. Raskob has never done things by halves. He ardently believes in the old axiom, "What thy hand finds to do, do it with all thy might." When he, to the astonishment of the country, accepted leadership of the Democratic campaign activities, he applied himself to the work with all the energy, enthusiasm and determination which have characterized his business career.

Nobody here in Detroit apparently knows what Mr. Raskob's intentions are. Were he to choose to withdraw from political work and to return to General Motors, he would be given a cordial reception, for the double reason that he rendered the corporation invaluable service as head of its finance committee and was at the same time popular with his coworkers. Those who know Mr. Raskob intimately are inclined to doubt whether he would care to give up his political work at this time.

It may be timely to add that, contrary to irresponsible rumors, there would not be the slightest opposition from any quarter to Mr. Raskob's return to General Motors. The fact is that he would be warmly welcomed.

THE public should understand that there are so many brainy giants connected with General Motors that it is recognized by them all that the corporation's success does not hinge upon any one individual. Stockholders, dealers and the public can rest satisfied that General Motors is the very opposite of a one-man corporation.

COAL OUTPUT FALLS INTO SLUMP

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

Coal production has fallen into a slump during the last two weeks. In addition to the loss of the lake markets during the winter season, industrial buying has been light in preparation for year-end shutdowns of consumers for inventory taking. The absence of severe weather also has prevented the development of buying for domestic purposes.

Prices, which have been unsatisfactory all year, have shown further weakness. Steam slack has been selling as low as 60 cents a ton. Domestic sizes are quoted $2.50 to $2.75 a ton at the mines. A few days of cold weather could bring about a substantial change in the market which would enable a better price to be realized for at least a part of the output.

Production has been averaging about 10,900,000 tons a week, or about 1,000,000 tons a week more than a year ago. It is quite likely, however, that reports for the next few weeks will show a sharp drop.

COAL'S PAST GLOOMY

At this time of the year it is customary for American industry to look back upon the accomplishments of the preceding 12 months and to paint rosy pictures of the prospects for the year to come. It is difficult to find anything pleasant to say about the coal industry.

It is true that 1927 has seen a moderate amount of progress. The large coal companies did not lose as much in 1928 as they did in 1927. The strike has been settled in several districts. Theoretically there is still a strike here, but the operators no longer worry about it. Miners are plentiful.

Some of the mines with good contracts assuring them a steady output showed profits in a few of the months of last year. But, taken as a whole, the year was a bad one. There is little ground for the belief that 1929 will be much better. Some reductions in costs may be possible through better labor conditions, and as a result of improvements in equipment, but the coal companies still will have trouble making ends meet.

If market prices do improve next year it will merely encourage idle mines to open. This will act as a new depressing influence. Coal mines have a problem not faced by other industries. When a factory is closed many of the fixed expenses still continue, but they are not as excessive as the cost of maintaining an idle mine. Most coal properties mine more water than coal. Unless mines are to be permanently abandoned pumping must go on regardless of whether coal is being shipped or not. For this reason it is often cheaper for mines to sell coal at unprofitable prices than to entirely suspend work. This condition makes coal's over capacity even more burdensome than a similar condition would be in some other business.

MERGERS FORCED

No matter how black the future of an industry may be it is not likely to remain in the pauper class forever. The continuation of present conditions eventually will force the abandonment of many mines, the consolidation of companies into stronger units, or possibly government regulation. When one or all of these have cleaned house, the survivors will regain a profitable basis.

The strong coal companies are rebuilding with this in mind. Pittsburgh Coal and other leading organizations are preparing for this future time and insuring the fact that they will not be numbered with the casualties. They are spending money to improve their plants. Machinery is replacing man power wherever a dollar can be saved. Electricity is replacing the mule. Cleaning plants are giving the consumer a better product than he ever received before.

The leaders in coal are smarting under the constantly reiterated charge of inefficiency. Those who intend to stay in the business are applying mass production and good engineering methods to rehabilitate the industry.

Mayor Cannot Override Rights of Civil Service

Prompt action is expected from the Civil Service Commission in the case of Murray G. Livingston.

Livingston has been a city employe for 28 years and was ousted from his office of Chief Inspector of the Division of Weights and Measures by Mayor Kline yesterday.

Livingston demands that the Mayor give good and sufficient reasons for his dismissal. "For the good of the service" is the Mayor's only explanation.

The casual observer cannot fail to couple the removal of Livingston with the case of Andrew F. Nolan, an employe of the Division of Weights and Measures. Nolan was discharged by Livingston and when the case was heard before the Civil Service Commission, Livingston testified that he removed Nolan because the Mayor ordered it. Nolan, who had offended the Mayor politically, was restored to his former job with full pay for the time lost.

If the discharge of Livingston is the result of his testimony in the Nolan case it is the plain duty of the Civil Service Commission to restore him to his job. Also to serve notice upon Mayor Kline that a city employe under the protection of Civil Service cannot be removed to suit the whim or pique of a superior.

Once in Ash Can It's Hard for Politicians Or Party to Get Out

Politicians and so-called "statesmen" if they want to stay out of the ash can should keep this clear in their minds.

The people hire them to work IN THIS country FOR this country, just as they hire a cook, to work IN their kitchen, FOR their family, not to run around cooking in other peoples' kitchens.

Had Woodrow Wilson been content to attend to his job in hand, as President of the United States, "keeping us out of war," he would have been worth to the United States at least ONE HUNDRED BILLIONS OF DOLLARS MORE THAN HE WAS WORTH. But he could not resist the conviction that the United States was too small for him, that he was made to rule, direct, and incidentally SAVE the whole planet. Savious are not so numerous.

What happened to Wilson and will happen to others is described by W. R. Hearst in an article published in many of his newspapers, including the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, last Friday.

"Would it not be wonderful if the government of the United States would only attend to the affairs of the United States, and not try to regulate all the rest of the world?"

Concerning Mr. Wilson's obsession as to his own grandeur and preordination, Mr. Hearst writes:

"Mr. Wilson was the first one to think that he knew more than George Washington and to insist on entangling this country with foreign nations.

"He was elected the first time he ran through the fortunate, or unfortunate, chance of a split in the Republican party.

"But the second time he ran he received a genuine indorsement and an actual election and wholly on the assertion—which became a campaign slogan—that he had kept us out of war.

"The mandate of the people of the United States, therefore, in that election was obviously to continue to keep the country free from foreign entanglements.

"But Mr. Wilson disregarded the mandate of the people and the injunction of George Washington, and the practice and policy of all preceding Presidents, and put the country into the great European war.

"Mr. Wilson spent thousands of millions of dollars for our part in the war; he loaned thousands of millions of dollars of American money to foreign nations, and he practically GAVE AWAY thousands of millions of dollars of the American people's money, as far as our ever getting it back is concerned.

"Then Mr. Wilson went abroad and brought home the League of Nations proposal and submitted it to the people of the United States, and the people buried him and his party with him in the political ash can; and there the party has been ever since, because of the almost unanimous repudiation of the Democratic foreign policy by the voters of the United States."

The words that politicians should ponder are the two words, "ash can." If there is one spot on earth which is not an attractive residence, it is the INSIDE of the political ash can.

Cats, no longer alive, land there, and tomato cans and broken bottles and POLITICIANS.

It is so simple for politicians to stay out of the ash can and retain public esteem.

JUST ATTEND TO THE BUSINESS FOR WHICH YOU ARE HIRED. Do your political cooking in the kitchen of the public that employs you. Don't race around trying to do something somewhere else. Don't try to graft a League of Nations or a World Court or any other nonsense of foreign interference on the government of this country.

Try to believe that the United States, able to take care of itself when it had only 4,000,000 population, is still able to take care of itself with 120,000,000 population, plus about all the money there is in sight, and more than half of all the world's gold.

In other words, try to BELIEVE IN YOUR OWN COUNTRY, and the people, possibly, will believe in you.

Why Should a Man Steal a Car?

One Chicago Gentleman Has Four Good Reasons.

Mr. Fenker, of Chicago, stole four automobiles and told the judge he had good excuses.

"My wife and four children needed food, so I stole a car." That was the reason for stealing car No. 1.

"What about the second car?" asked the judge. "My wife needed an operation, so I stole another car," said Fenker. When in doubt steal a car seems to be his motto.

Fenker helped a friend to steal the next two cars because his friend needed money.

The judge sentenced him to one year on probation, suggesting to him, however, that he should find some other way of raising money when he happens to need it.

That particular sentence would indicate that car stealing isn't taken very seriously in these prosperous days.

Tales That Are Told

A Long Wait

A SUCCESSFUL meeting had just been concluded at a certain club. At 2 o'clock next morning the secretary was awakened at his private house by his telephone.

"Is that the secretary of the Oilers' Club?" asked a hazy voice. "Can you tell me when the club opens again?"

"It opens at 6 o'clock tomorrow evening," replied the secretary shortly. "But what on earth do you mean bringing me out of bed at this time of night to ask that?"

"Very sorry, old chap," came an apologetic voice, "but, you see, I'm in rather an awkward predicament. I've just woke up in the bar."

Convincing

AN estate agent had tried in vain to sell a new house to the married couple who had called on him.

"But why should we buy a house," countered the young wife. "What's the good of it when we get it? Listen. I was born in a hospital ward, brought up at a boarding-school, and after that went to college. I was courted in a motor car and married in church; we sleep in a hotel and get meals out. I spend the mornings playing golf, my afternoons playing bridge. In the evenings we dance or go to the pictures, and when I'm dead I'll be buried. All we want is a garage with a bedroom."

Worst Story I Have Heard Today

By WILL ROGERS

IT'S hard to tell how a kid can get you into more trouble, by understanding you or by misunderstanding. Anyway, whatever you say, the kid is pretty apt to make it worse when he repeats it.

There was an old guy that owned a real profitable manufacturing plant, and he was a kind of an old crab. Johnson was his secretary, and didn't like him any too well. Johnson lived right near the factory, and one day the kid bulled his way into the office of the boss and says, "Say, Mr. Eggleston, can us kids go up to the belfry this afternoon?"

The old fellow was feeling pleased, so he laughed.

"Why, we ain't got any belfry," he says.

"Oh, surely you must have. You're kiddin' me. Us kids is going to start practicing baseball, and I heard Dad say that you had some bats in your belfry, and I thought maybe you wouldn't mind—"

But the kid didn't finish it, you know.

Isn't It So?

Even the fortune hunter sometimes has to pay a guide.

The difference between amateur and professional sport seems to depend entirely on who gets the money.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

YOU ARE FACING A NEW YEAR. WHAT YOU WILL GET OUT OF THAT YEAR, DEPENDS ON YOU. YOU WILL GET OUT OF IT EXACTLY WHAT YOU PUT INTO IT.

Certain things will happen to you, of course, over which you will have little or no control.

Sickness may happen to you—poverty may happen—friends may be false to you—death may come your way.

You cannot prevent such circumstances. But you can determine what effect they will have upon your life. You can determine your own status in this new year which you are facing. You can decide, right now, whether you are going to emerge from it triumphant—or licked.

THE GREAT THING ABOUT LIFE IS NOT TO BE AFRAID OF IT.

Tackle it! Don't duck!

Go at it wholeheartedly—taking it as it comes. Don't try to drive bargains with Fate. Pay your price like a good sport as you go along.

Rare lives are never cheap—

Great lives are never easy—

Many people lead half-portion lives because they're unwilling to pay the price for whole portions. They yell loudly for Their Chance, but when it comes they want to haggle over the terms. They're afraid of it because it doesn't quite fit their pet program or because it violates their prejudices—and while they're hesitating, the chance is lost. Then they wonder why they never get ahead.

Don't hesitate!

Don't hide from life or fear to take it on the chin!

Get out into the thick of it!

It won't be easy. You'll have to take risks, break old habits, snap out of a lot of softness and silliness—but it will all be worth it!

IF YOU STAND THE GAFF, YOU CAN GET ALMOST ANYTHING YOU WANT OUT OF LIFE.

If you want peace, you can find peace this year.

If you want power, you can find power.

If you want wisdom, you can find wisdom—

And success is a cinch, if you're willing to pay the price for it.

STAND UP TO LIFE AND LIFE WILL STAND UP WITH YOU.

THE ZEPPELIN

By Garrett P. Serviss

"Will an object filled with a lighter than air gas, having the ability to float in air, still float if instead of a lighter than air gas, a vacuum is introduced? This vacuum is to take up the same space and not to alter the dimensions of the object."—Harry A. Viedman, Bronz, N. Y.

IN these days of Zeppelins nobody should be in any doubt about the way in which a balloon is caused to float. The object of these articles being to try to make plain things plain to understand, I do not hesitate to go back to the ABC'S of the simplest science.

Now, consider the evident fact that a balloon filled with ordinary air will not rise, though the balloon be swelled out to its full size. But, if the air in the balloon is expanded by heat, the balloon rises. Why? It is because the expanded air has less density and consequently less weight, volume for volume, than the air outside the balloon. The expansion of the air inside keeps the balloon swelled out to its full size, so that it occupies as much space as when it was filled with cold air. But its total weight is now less because of the decrease of weight of the inclosed warm air. So the balloon as a whole now weighs less than an equal quantity, or volume, of the air surrounding it. It is therefore pushed upward by the heavier air around it, just as a cork is pushed upward by water because the cork weighs less, volume for volume, than the water. And the balloon will continue to rise until it reaches a height at which the weight of the surrounding air—which steadily decreases with elevation—becomes equal, volume for volume, with that of the balloon. The first balloons ever made were floated by heated air.

I have learned to use something far better than the heated air of the first balloons. We use some gas that is naturally lighter than air. The lightest gas known is hydrogen, and pure hydrogen would carry a balloon higher than anything else. But hydrogen is very inflammable, and therefore dangerous, so that other gases, not so light, but safer, are used in place of it. Helium is the best, being next to hydrogen in density, but it is costly. Other gases, or mixtures of gases, have also been employed. The essential quality is that they must be considerably lighter, volume for volume, than air. The lifting power is proportional to the density of the gas compared with that of atmospheric air.

To show how much weight a balloon of given cubic capacity will carry, multiply its size measured in cubic yards by two and subtract the weight, in pounds, of the material of which the balloon is made (together with that of the car), and also the weight of the gas that fills the balloon. The multiplying factor, two, is the approximate weight in pounds of one cubic yard of air, and this is equal to the lifting force that the air exerts on an object whose volume is one cubic yard.

Now, coming to the question of what would be the effect of having the balloon enclosed in a perfect vacuum, it is evident that in that case there would be no weight to be subtracted, except that of the material of the balloon, so that the rising force would be greater even than if hydrogen were used. But—and this is a very serious "but"—the weight of the shell enclosing the vacuum would be so great on account of the resistance that it would have to offer to the crushing force of the surrounding air—nearly 15 pounds to the square inch—that it would far exceed the lifting force which, as we have seen, is only about two pounds per cubic yard.

Bible Passages

Love of Money

(Timothy 6: 10-19.)

FOR the love of money is the root of all evil: which while some coveted after, they have erred from the faith, and pierced themselves through with many sorrows.

But thou, O man of God, flee these things; and follow after righteousness, godliness, faith, love, patience, meekness.

Fight the good fight of faith, lay hold of eternal life, whereunto thou art also called, and hast professed a good profession before many witnesses.

I give thee charge in the sight of God, who quickeneth all things, and before Christ Jesus, who before Pontius Pilate witnessed a good confession:

That thou keep this commandment without spot, unrebukeable, until the appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ:

Which in his times he shall shew, who is the blessed and only Potentate, the King of kings, and Lord of lords;

Who only hath immortality, dwelling in the light which no man can approach unto; whom no man hath seen, nor can see; to whom be honour and power everlasting.

Charge them that are rich in this world, that they be not high-minded, nor trust in uncertain riches, but in the living God, who giveth us richly all things to enjoy;

That they do good, that they be rich in good works, ready to distribute, willing to communicate;

Laying up in store for themselves a good foundation against the time to come, that they may lay hold on eternal life.

Magnetism

THIS magnetism is a gift,
A thing of such surpassing worth
That it can raise men up, can lift
Them high above the ranks of Earth.
It lends its glories to the low,
The plain, the poor, the weak, sometimes,
And where its magic currents flow
Life's dullest line with music chimes.

Intangible as morning mist,
Elusive as the breath of song;
Yet men, impotent to resist,
Beneath its lures are drawn along
To every folly, every sin,
Or every height great souls attain.
Through magnetism clowns can win
What kings, without it, seek in vain.

Department of Commerce informs us that there are plenty of nuts for the holidays—and they don't all grow on trees.

New York Day by Day

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—Save at the Metropolitan opera, the hired claque is almost a memory. In the theater there was only one evidence of the horny-handed pests this season. When the Metropolitan gives them the air—and it should pronto—amusement lovers will offer prayerful thanks.

Their vulgar and ostentatious outbursts at opera has been an insult to the intelligence of patrons for years. In the theater the claque was not so annoying. It was mostly friends of the players and producers and not disturbers hired for so much a night.

Nevertheless it was all a pain in the neck. It was not unusual for applause at a theater to hold up a show for five minutes just to pay tribute to someone whose party was encompassed in the line: "Madam will receive you." Opening performances ran until after midnight. A Follies premiere once lasted until 3 a. m.

Theatrical performances are now timed to the split second. It is a heavy expense otherwise. On opening nights the performance may run 10 or 15 minutes overtime, but rarely longer. After the first showing a first class play runs as smoothly as a well-regulated watch.

In other days "stealing a bow" was an elegant sop to the actor's vanity. There were some who would carry a banjo to the footlights to give a fake idea they could play it just for an extra bow. It was so irritatingly overdone that a storm of applause trailed off into an outbreak of hisses.

In musical comedies and revues today encores are rarely permitted. And a single bow is the limit. To frustrate all this foolishness, producers provide a quick change at high speed and the show toddles merrily on. All of which is tough on the performer, but dandy for customers.

In dramas, the curtain is often lifted after the second act so players may receive their accolade and the assemblage on the stage is thinned down until the star or featured players take their cherished bow alone. The old-time curtain speech is restricted to first nights.

A hotel snooper discovers after an investigation of 100 New York hotels that the smallest dining room in each is invariably the best patronized. Another example of the metropolitan herd instinct.

In a speakeasy row between two gorillas, one of the belligerents cried: "Listen, sweetheart, take this as a keepsake." Then with a knife he slashed a six-inch gash across his adversary's face. And the identity of a gray-haired newspaper man who reached a corner six blocks away in one minute flat is none of your business.

Big banks are called upon more than other institutions to provide posts for relatives and friends of good customers. It seems almost every one has a few cast-off relatives they would like to have sit at pretty desks in banks. A banker tells me he has more than 1,000 applicants for such positions on file. And he added a trifle gloomily: "In many instances we are almost forced to provide a place or lose a valuable customer."

There is a type of New Yorker who grows superior in telling of a meal he has enjoyed in various white-tiled restaurants around town. He gives the patronizing impression of indulging a lark—a gastronomical slumming experiment. He does not seem to know the wealthiest people are frequent patrons of moderate-priced eating places serving plain and well-cooked dishes. Nothing, they say, is more monotonous than fancy food. Within the week I saw Helen Gould and her husband dining in a side street tea room. Wall street millionaires perch on stools at those counter places with big shiny coffee urns. In a chili joint recently I saw two theatrical men with real estate holdings in the millions. The rich eat where they please without excuse. It is the four-flusher, trying to maintain a front, whose manner is apologetic.

Of what with an elopement in the family, an extra tax assessment, a sudden step off the curb to a banana skin, and God knows what all, I have turned wanly and eagerly to a circular reading: "Do as we tell you five minutes a day and you'll bubble with joy." I have reached that pathetic willingness to smile through the tears and do anything. I'll even admire the Paramount Building.

CHICKEN FEET

By Herbert Kaufman

RUMOR asserts that Mr. Rockefeller saves chicken feet. "They say" he parboils, peels and pops them into the soup pot.

If so, his kitchen follows the accepted practice of the best chefs, who have learned what succulence and nourishment are tucked in tidbits that average folk high-hat.

Mr. Rockefeller gives away millions, but throws away nothing.

He even bothered to count how many drops of solder were wasted in making kerosene containers, and subsequently endowed several universities with savings from a better method of manufacturing tin cans.

Standard Oil earnings came out of salvaged lead splashes, as well as petroleum fields and by-product yields.

Gold is mined fleck by fleck—so are profits. Want follows waste everywhere.

Securities that aren't paying regular dividends can generally trace their bargain counter position to the uncaulked cracks of management. Six per cent will keep any stock at par.

Solvency is at the mercy of every carelessly handled detail.

Where stamps aren't counted, where pencils and paper are un-supervised, and the smallest orders placed without price comparison, profits are seeping away in nickel trickles, the total of which frequently determines whether the balance sheet shall land in the red or black.

Meat packers could double their gains on a penny per pound margin.

Department stores barely keep more of their overturn than the discounts.

"Chicken feet" parsimonies and "chicken feed" items are often the determining factors in business success. They were in John Rockefeller's.

His alert eye never missed a slip or a drip. He watched for leakholes as hard as for opportunities.

That's why competitors, with identical goods and the same chance to make good, went down before him like tenpins.

The rich are seldom thriftless—which explains how they become rich.

OH, THESE WOMEN

By Leola Allard

A NEW YORK mother, whose daughter just graduated from a fashionable girls' school, says that she and her husband are getting entirely too much sleep, because, as is usual in apartments, there is only one living room, and, as is necessary in New York apartments for anything less than millionaires, there is no other room suitable for the pretty daughter to use for entertaining her suitors.

"All her father and I can do is go to bed," said the mother. Her brother, who is younger, sometimes sits in a corner and grouches, which doesn't add to her happiness."

Architects might think this over. A suitor room could be small, however, comma, girls get married so soon after graduation that it might be better just to let the family get an overdose of sleep during the courting days.

A man and wife, son and daughter, from Omaha, started on a trip to Europe. The father figured out just what small pieces of baggage would be assigned to each member of the party.

"What are you going to carry?" he asked the deb daughter.

"I'm going to carry candy and a magazine in one hand and hold my coat together with the other," said Miss Daphne, and that's what she did.

Four girls have married this past week for money. Old men told them, so they say, that they were rich and would put them on Easy Street, where so many girls choose to live. They had no consciences about deceiving the old men, and after they married and found out they had to live in boarding houses and work, they indignantly asked for damages.

If the old men really deceived them, it's what almost any jury would call a 50-50 marriage.

If an old man must lie, how fortunate he picks out a girl who wants to marry for money. Lies beget lies, and a good job in the hand is better than a limousine in the bush.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

ARE you having a struggle to forget some of the men or the women in whom you were interested before your marriage?

Possibly you were engaged to marry before you chose your present partner.

Do you think of it and wonder if you might not have done better to marry the other one?

Perhaps that one has been more successful than the one you married.

Somehow you seem to have a hard time to prevent regretful thoughts on that score.

As a woman, you picture the position you might be filling as the wife of a possible rejected suitor.

As a man, you may be comparing your wife with one who has improved with the years in ways in which you think your wife has not advanced.

It is unwise to permit such thoughts to get a hold on you.

They may bring serious discontent and they are unfair to your partner.

While you might have married a greater success, there might have been other disagreeable features connected with it which would have robbed you of happiness.

If you are married, there should be no thoughts of those persons whom you might have married.
